TWO MORE OUT FOR CONGRESS

Cave and Wesleyan Professor to Seek Nomination, Boost Dem Field to Three.

Two more candidates, both Democrats, were in the race today for the short-term congressional nomination in the 17th district while the Richland board of elections completed plans for the special elections called for Feb. 6 and 27 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late William A. Ashbrook.

Frank Cave, Mansfield real estate dealer and former speaker of the Ohio of representatives, announced he will seek the Democratic nomination for the short term and petitions were being circulated for Dr. Ben A. Arneson of Delaware, also a Democrat.

Dr. Arneson,who is head of the political science department at Ohio Wesleyan university, has made no announcement of his candidacy. His friends were circulating petitions for him.

With Cave and Dr. Arneson in the contest the number of candidates was boosted to five, three Democrats and two Republicans. William Haas had previously announced on the Democratic ticket. J. Harry McGregor of Coshocton and Col. Oliver J. Dockery, jr., of

Special Elections Cost Courthouse Proposed Elevator

Ordinarily, special elections don't have much to do with elevators in courthouses, but the congressional elections coming up next month may delay the installation of a "lift" in the Richland county courthouse. County Commissioner C. L. Mitchell said today.

The February elections are expected to cost Richland county $6,000 which will be paid from funds the commissioners planned to use for a new elevator, Mitchell said.

Describing the elections as "pure nonsense," Mitchell, who is chairman of the board of commissioners, added that "the elevator proposal probably will have to be passed up this year for lack of funds."

The county appropriated no money for special elections, but must pay its share of the cost in the 17th district which includes six counties.

Mitchell pointed out that plans for an elevator and other courthouse improvements to cost about $15,000 had been drafted and work was due to start as soon as it was certain that sufficient funds would be available without issuing bonds.

500 Survivors of Sea Disaster Reach Port

Seaplanes Still Search As Fire Victims Of Orazio Are Brought In By Italian Liners.

(By Associated Press)

GENOA, Italy—The Italian liners Conte Biancamano and Colombo arrived here today with more than 500 survivors of the burned Italian motorship Orazio.

More than half of them were either injured or burned. One of the critically burned was a baby whose mother, a Peruvian, perished in the sea.

At the time of the rescue ships' arrival, the list of missing stood at 70, of which six were believed passengers.

The Italian line, owner of the Orazio, reported 561 persons had been saved. The French contraband control reported it took 12 Germans off the ship before the fire in the Mediterranean Sunday. The original passenger and crew lists totaled 643.

Representatives of the line and of companies which had insured the Orazio went aboard the rescue vessels to talk to survivors and question Captain Schiano on the cause of the disaster.

The sudden explosion and fire were reported to have destroyed most of the Orazio's lifeboats.

Among 11 Colombians rescued by the Colombo was Senora Cecilia Santos Ortiz, niece of the president of Colombia and wife of Colombia's consul general at Genoa. She suffered slight leg

GROHOL NAMED

Crafton Gives Rookie Officer Permanent Appointment.

John Grohol, whose 90-day probationary period on the Mansfield police department was ended yesterday, was given a permanent appointment today by Safety-Service Director C. M. Crafton.

Grohol's name was one of three on an eligible list submitted by the civil service commission when William Kneeland, veteran police officer, retired, three months ago.

Grohol was given the usual probationary appointment by the former administration. Police Chief Meade K. Bates notified Crafton yesterday that Grohol's services had been satisfactory.

The new officer was a bus driver for the Mansfield Rapid Transit company before his appointment.

CITY IN PATH OF NEW COLD WAVE

Zero Weather Due to Strike Again Tomorrow With Snow Forecast for Tonight.

A new cold wave was bearing down on the Mansfield area today after the temperature moderated to 20 degrees today to give the city its "warmest" day in more than a week.

It wasn't exactly warm today, however, with a low of five below zero reported this morning by Otto Sprunger, official weather observer. The lowest reported in the city was four above and other readings ranged up to seven above. The reading at noon was 20 degrees.

A new cold blast is hovering over the western states and was reported moving slowly eastward today. Sub-zero temperatures were reported from the

Crime Wave Hits Loudonville Again But Burglars Are Foiled

LOUDONVILLE — The crime wave which hit this community ten days ago broke out anew today with the breaking and entering of a garage and an attempt to break into a filling station.

Both jobs were done in the same manner, according to R. G. Schnittke, night patrolman. He said he passed the Tower filling station at 2 a. m. today and found everything intact but that when he returned at 4 a. m. he found that two windows besides the entrance had been broken and the prowler had attempted to unlock the door by reaching in through the broken windows.

The attempt was unsuccessful however, as the door can be unlocked only by using two different keys, according to Glen Derrenberger, who operates the station.

Sheriff Dale Hammond of Ashland county took fingerprints on the windows. Derrenberger said there was no money in the place.

Clyde Hughes, who operates a Water street garage, found that someone had broken into the place by the same method used at the gas station when he arrived at 6:30 a. m. A window had been broken next to the door and the intruder had reached in and unlocked the door. Hughes said nothing was taken.

The wave of petty crimes started a week ago Friday when two new buildings were dedicated. Four persons were robbed of $236 by pickpockets operating in the crowds. Later two homes were broken into and silverware taken and $50 taken from a cash register in the school building after thieves had broken into it.

Last Thursday morning the safe of the Farmers Equity company, containing $800 in cash and checks, was blown off by a charge of nitro-glycerine, but the robbers were frightened away, taking only a radio.

NEW AIR RAIDS COMING

Communists Intensify War on Finns; Latter Say Planes Damaged Red Warships.

BULLETIN

HELSINKI—(AP)— Russian troops trying to break through Finnish defenses northeast of Lake Ladoga are taking a terrific punishment, tonight's Finnish army communique reported.

(By International News Service)

HELSINKI—Soviet legions hammered at Finnish defenses in the Taipale sector of the Karelian isthmus today after a series of sharp clashes in which at least 1,000 Russians were reported to have been killed.

Advices to Helsinki said the Russians were slain when Finnish troops repelled strong attacks on the Karelian isthmus and just north of Lake Ladoga.

At the same time it was reported the Russians were renewing aerial activity on the Petsamo front in the far north, where they also tried to drop parachute troops without success.

One of the captured Soviet parachutists told Finnish officers that the Russians were preparing to launch even greater air raids than those of the past few weeks, but that they were having serious difficulties with their gasoline supplies.

(A Reuters (British) News Agency dispatch from Helsinki said that several Russian warships were reported to have been severely damaged during the recent Finnish air raids against the Soviet air and naval base at Kronstadt. (This report stated that all the Soviet warships are icebound at the Kronstadt base.)

Try to Turn Flank.

The Russian offensive against Taipale was launched in an evident attempt to turn the left wing on the Mannerheim line, which ever since the war began has been withstanding heavy Soviet artillery pounding and repeated raids.

Before the assault began, Russian artillery opened up a terrific artillery barrage, sending shells crashing into the Finnish defenses at the rate of three or four a second.

WARN RUMANIA

Allies Take Firm Stand on Sending Oil to Nazis.

BUCHAREST—(AP)—Britain and France today warned the Rumanian government that any attempt to compel British and French oil companies operating in Rumania to furnish oil for Germany might "lead to grave complications."

The warning followed a Rumanian decree creating a national petroleum commission with authority to control production, refining and export of all Rumanian oil "in conformity with the interests of the state."

The decree gave the commission sweeping powers, including the right to take over companies not submitting to its orders.

In some foreign circles the Rumanian decree was reported due to German pressure to obtain all the oil possible from Rumania.

BUILDING CODE PLEA RENEWED

Seeburger Urges Adoption to Combat Fire Hazards; Hits Shortage of Manpower.

Adoption of a building code as a means of eliminating fire hazards and reducing Mansfield fire insurance rates was again urged on city officials in the annual report of Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger.

Among other recommendations offered by Seeburger was the addition of at least four more men to the department, a request that has been made for the past 12 years.

He termed the shortage of manpower at stations Nos. 3 and 4 "serious," pointing out that No. 4 company with only two men on a shift serves the factory district, and No. 3 with the same number of firemen serves the entire southwest section of the city.

Recommendations also called for the replacement of inadequate equipment including three pumpers, all more than 15 years old, along with the installation of fire alarm boxes, especially in Woodland which has none.

Similar To Other Codes.

The building code which Seeburger urged would be similar to the present plumbing and electrical codes which are in effect in the city. It would provide a building inspector who would pass on all buildings constructed in the city, including dwellings and adjacent buildings.

Seeburger said that such a requirement would largely reduce fire hazards and indirectly the fire insurance rates. He said that in the past month the department had been called out at least a dozen times by fires started by defective fireplaces and that many of them had been in new houses.

Careless installation of furnaces is another cause of fires, he explained, which would be eliminated if buildings had to come up to a city code and were passed on by an inspector.

The chief's report showed that there was 23 more fires in Mans-

Browder Calls Verdict A Step in 'War Drive'

EARL BROWDER

Communist Silent as He Leaves Court, But Noisy at Rally.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The government, pursuing its drive against federal law violations that might have foreign implications, added to its list today the conviction of Earl Browder on passport fraud charges—a conviction the Communist leader said was "but one movement in the drive toward war."

Browder was silent yesterday as he left the courtroom where he had been sentenced to four years in prison and fined $2,000, but he went to a Madison Square Garden Lenin memorial rally a few hours later to lash out against the government after pleading in court in his own behalf that he was a victim of a federal campaign against "civil rights."

Browder, native of Kansas and head of the American Communist party, heard his verdict after a four-day trial and a 45-minute jury deliberation. He was convicted on each of two counts that might have brought him 10 years in prison.

His bail of $7,500 was continued until tomorrow when he must appear for approval of new bond pending an appeal.

At the Lenin mass meeting Browder termed his conviction a "great honor."

"The verdict is but one movement in the drive toward war," he said.

The 20,000-capacity garden was filled to hear the man who served a prison term for draft dodging during the World war and who was his party's presidential candidate in 1936.

After his speech, the rally by a rising vote adopted a resolution declaring his conviction was "a verdict not only against Earl Browder but against all Americans who cherish peace, freedom and well-being."

At his trial, the defense offered no witnesses and Browder, calling himself a correspondence-school lawyer, argued his own case.

He was warned several times from the bench to stick to evidence and it was this he referred to when he told his garden audience that he was "prohibited from speaking except within the limits laid down by the judge."

EMPLOYES WILL GET BACK PAY

Cleveland Arranges Deal to Pay Municipal Workers.

CLEVELAND — (INS) — Two weeks behind in their pay since May, 1938, Cleveland city employes will get their back pay through a deal worked out by the city and Cuyahoga county, Commissioner of Accounts Walter A. Rowe said today.

Money for the salary payments will be obtained when the city buys from the county $538,000 worth of delinquent tax notes, the purchase money to come from the sinking fund. The county then will pay the city $538,000 which it owes for the care of patients in city welfare institutions, Rowe said.

BRITISH DENY CONTROL POINT DISCRIMINATION

Say American Shippers Won't Co-operate to Speed Up Clearance of Boats.

TOKYO WARNS SHARPLY

Sternly Advises Britain to Avoid Any Repetition of 'Disagreeable Action.'

(By International News Service)

LONDON — Great Britain today rejected the contention of Secretary of State Hull that American ships are being discriminated against at Gibraltar and elsewhere in the Mediterranean and blamed lack of "co-operation" by the United States for the situation which resulted in a new protest from Washington.

In answer to Hull's demand that Britain modify its treatment of American ships and cargos, particularly at Gibraltar, authoritative British circles placed responsibility for delays encountered by American shipping upon the shoulders of the United States.

(Editor's note—An International News Service dispatch from Washington disclosed that the United States is prepared to demand substantial indemnities for losses resulting from British interference with American shipping.)

"There is no discrimination between American and Italian vessels by the Gibraltar contraband control," a spokesman said.

"Lack of American co-operation is to blame for the situation which prevails.

"If the Italians are getting faster clearance, it is because of their willingness to co-operate."

There was no immediate indication as to when a formal reply to Secretary Hull's protest would be forwarded, but general belief was that this would at least await the outcome of today's scheduled conference in Washington between Hull and the Marquess of Lothian, British ambassador to the United States.

The delays encountered by American vessels, authoritative circles declared, have been due partly to the fact that ships under the Stars and Stripes have been carrying miscellaneous cargoes embracing up to 300 separate items.

Italian ships, on the other hand,

Nazi Mines Account for Two Ships, Subs Get Others.

LONDON — (INS) — Two more ships, the 1523-ton British steamer Baltanglia and the 1598-ton Norwegian boat Pluto were sunk by mines off the northeast coast of England today. No lives were lost.

Overnight, however, loss of 20 lives was reported with disclosure that the 251-ton armed British trawler Valdora and the 5329-ton Greek freighter Ekatontarchos Dracoulis had met their doom.

"His majesty's trawler Valdora is overdue and is presumed to have been sunk with one officer and nine ratings aboard," the British admiralty announced.

Dispatches from Lisbon stated the Greek vessel was torpedoed by a German submarine off the coast of Portugal with an indicated loss of 10 lives. A Portuguese destroyer rescued 28 of her 50 crew members and an Italian steamer picked up 12 more survivors. The remaining 10 were missing and believed drowned.

Wanted To See If Man Cheated At Solitaire, 'Peeper' Alibis

A burning curiosity to see—so he said—whether a strange man cheated at his game of solitaire led a Mansfield man into the clutches of the law today with a $50 suspended fine hanging over him on condition of good behavior.

Edward C. Sinerson, 32, of 99 Lily street, was arrested last night on a charge of window peeping after Neil Remy, 384 West Third street, notified police that there was a prowler at his home.

Sinerson, who is married and has a small child, was questioned in municipal court this morning after he pleaded guilty.

He said that he had quit work at a Mansfield factory about 10 p. m. and had "gone for a walk" out West Third street when he looked in a window and saw a man playing solitaire.

"I remembered," he told the court, "that my father always played solitaire and always cheated and I was curious to know if this man cheated too. I thought I'd watch him and see if I could catch him cheating."

There were two young women in the room at the time Sinerson said his mind was on the game of solitaire.

Judge G. J. Kalbfleisch deferred sentence until the man's wife came to his office and he questioned them both. He imposed a $50 fine and suspended it on good behavior. He also warned Sinerson that if he were caught again, he would demand that he be prosecuted.

Morgenthau Says Debt Limit Should Hit 50 Billions

FAVORS ENDING PUBLIC WORKS EXPENDITURES

Treasury Secretary Reveals Views Before Committee on Appropriations.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Secretary Morgenthau contends that the limit on the federal debt should be raised to $50,000,000,000 and that the budget should be balanced by reduced expenditures and increased taxes.

Answering a barrage of questions, the treasury secretary told members of the house appropriations committee during hearings on his department's 1941 supply bill that if it was up to him he would recommend raising the debt limit from the present $45,000,000,000 and that he would "take another look" at the situation when the figure reached $49,000,000,000.

He expressed the opinion that all federal expenditures such as public works, public roads and reclamation projects should be trimmed or dispensed with temporarily in view of prospective heavy expenditures for defense.

He also testified that the interest on the public debt the next fiscal year would be $1,100,000,000, about $50,000,000 more than in the current year.

For the third time he recommended that congress inquire into bank holding companies—situations "where a bank holding company can go in and buy up a bank and take control away from the community."

Reports from other departments showed that:

1. Smuggling increased last year. Customs bureau officials said that seizures of merchandise increased from 5,726 in 1938 to 5,877, but that the value of the merchandise jumped from $424,636 to $1,129,483. Most of the recovered material was oriental rugs.

2. The internal revenue bureau has recovered about $3,000,000 in excess profits from manufacturers of defense equipment. The law limits profits on naval vessels to 10 per cent and on army aircraft to 12 per cent.

3. The bureau also received more than $2,000,000 from 22 "movie people" whom the bureau thought "had a real intent to evade the payment of income taxes."

Pay Million Daily.

4. W. S. Alexander, federal alcohol administrator, estimated that brewers pay $1,000,000 daily to federal and state governments and distillers contribute $900,000,000 annually. He said the federal government received about $600,000,000 of the total while the rest went to the states.

5. The mint wants congress to appropriate $400,050 to transport $2,000,000,000 in gold from New York to Fort Knox, Ky., and $37,500 to ship $150,000,000 more from San Francisco to Denver.

6. The postoffice department has asked congress for $3,200,000 additional for foreign air-mail transportation to increase service to South America and New Zealand.

McNutt Urges U.S. Payment Of Ohio Pension Demands

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, has recommended presidential approval of legislation to adjust Ohio's claim for unpaid federal old age pension contributors. Rep. Thomas A. Jenkins (R., O.) said last night after a talk with McNutt, adding:

"I have assurances that President Roosevelt will sign my bill."

The president has until next Friday midnight to act on the measure which would direct the Social Security board to ascertain the amount due the state and certify payments.

Congress approved the bill after eliminating provisions to compel the treasury to pay $1,338,160 without board certification, a procedure to which McNutt objected.

The claim resulted from the board's refusal to remit the federal share of old age pensions for October, 1938, because of an administrative dispute with former Gov. Martin L. Davey.

Safety Director C. M. Crafton and Fire Chief Charles Seeburger took the horses and hay out of the Mansfield fire department when they re-wrote the rules and regulations for the department. The rules had not been revised since 1913 and therefore contained regulations governing the care of horses and how to feed them. This came to light the other day when Crafton was reading the old book of rules. The new book will be brought up to date — minus the horses.

Skaters have literally worn out the ice on North Lake in the past two weeks, so city park employes and firemen are going to attempt to give the lake a new coating this evening. Park Superintendent Frank R. Burton said the lake will be flooded with a shallow layer of water which is expected to freeze tonight, providing a new and smoother skating surface. Skating will not be permitted on the lake until tomorrow, he said.

Even school children are trying to follow President Roosevelt's example of advancing dates of holidays so they will have earlier vacations, according to H. J. Dotson, principal of John Simpson Junior high school. Announcing last Friday that there would be a check-up on textbooks on the 22nd, Dotson was informed by a boy at the Warner building that he couldn't do that because he would not be in school because of Washington's birthday. Told by Dotson that Washington's birthday wasn't until next month, the youth replied, "Why can't it be moved up too? Thanksgiving was."

It was enough to arouse his temper, a South Main street resident admitted today. A couple of days ago, he was informed by his wife that the water pipes in the home were frozen. This was nothing unusual as it had happened before, and he knew just where the pipes usually froze. After four or five hours with a candle in an attempt to thaw the pipes, he happened to look through the cellar window and noticed that his neighbors were carrying water. Then he learned—after losing a half day's work—that a main had burst some distance down the street.

COMPENSATION PAYMENTS DROP

Ohio Records Show Decrease of $946,000 Granted Workmen in '39.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Ohio paid $14,419,972 in benefits to disabled laborers under the state workmen's compensation during 1939, a decrease of $946,499 from 1938.

Clarence H. Knisley, member of the state industrial commission which administers the program, attributed the decrease partly to unemployment compensation for which come claimants became eligible, and the return to industrial payrolls of many applicants with a low degree of disability.

Claims, filed at a rate of 700 for each working day, increased 17,957 last year, Knisley reported. Applications for benefits rose from 165,223 in 1938 to 183,180 in 1939. The number of employers insured under the program mounted to 47,824, as compared to 46,062 in 1938.

Premium receipts gained $2,078,125, collections in 1939 totaling $19,000,959 as compared to $16,922,834 the previous year.

Knisley said the amount of defaulted bonds held by the commission was reduced to $760,182 last Dec. 31 from $2,480,589 at the end of 1938.

The commission had a surplus of 6,000,000 and a reserve of $55,500,000 to protect claims of injured workmen at the end of 1939, Knisley declared. About $5,000,000 of that total was in cash and the remainder in securities.

ONLY WHITE RAJAH IN WORLD TAKES TITLE FROM CROWN PRINCE

(By United Press)

KUCHING, Sarawak, Borneo—His Highness, Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, white Rajah of Sarawak, deprived his nephew, Anthony of his title of Rajah Muda, or crown prince, by royal decree today on the ground that he was not yet fitted for his job.

The Rajah's face previously had been reddened when one of his three daughters married Harry Roy, a British jazz band leader, and another married Bob Gregory, British wrestler.

The only white Rajah in the world, ruler of 500,000 people in an area of 50,000 square miles, fired his nephew by a royal decree which said:

"It appears to us that our nephew is not yet fitted for the exercise of the responsibilities of this high office."

The decree deprived Anthony Brooke of all authority and powers which had previously been vested in him when he became crown prince in March last year.

Anthony left Kuching early this month to take up war work in England.

Last November Anthony married Miss Kathleen Hudden, an English girl, at Rangoon, Burma.

HOUSE FAVORS CARRYING ON 'ISM' INQUIRY

Charges of Dies Association With 'Christian Front' Brings Sharp Denials.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A charge that Rep. Dies (D., Tex.) had associated with a "prominent collaborator" of the Christian front brought prompt denials today and failed to stem house sentiment for renewal of the Dies committee on un-American activities.

A resolution authorizing continuance of the inquiry into subversive affairs for another year was called up for house debate with an overwhelming approval indicated.

In the senate, meanwhile, the way was cleared for a major economy test—the bill appropriating emergency funds for defense and neutrality expenses. Leaders predicted that the chamber would approve not only the house slash of $20,176,935 below budget estimates but also another $12,788,664 cut made by the senate appropriations committee.

Makes Dies Charges.

The accusation against Dies was placed in the congressional record yesterday by Rep. Hook (D., Mich.) as the house rules committee voted to favor re-establishing the Dies committee.

Hook asserted that Dies had been "taking us for a ride for his own political purposes," and linked his name with Merwin K. Hart of New York, whom he described as a "prominent collaborator" of the Christian Front.

(Seventeen members of the Christian Front have been charged in New York with plotting to overthrow the government.)

Dies, ill at Orange, Tex., called Hook's statement "too ridiculous to justify serious consideration." He said that although he knew Hart, he never had been associated with him and knew nothing of his having any connection with the Christian Front.

Hart, president of the New York state economic council, denied in New York that he was "directly or indirectly connected" with the Front, "and termed Hook's assertion "an unmitigated lie."

FAIR ENOUGH!

Pegler Asks Green's Proof His Attack On A. F. L. Is Paid For By Labor Enemies

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—William Green, the illustrious president of the American Federation of Labor, has made a strange reply to prove that the bosses of two of his most powerful international unions are not criminals of the most vicious type. These two are Willie Bioff, the dictator of the theatrical and movie trades, and George Scalese, president of the Building Service Employes International Union.

They got their training for the post of bargaining agent by serving as such for prostitutes and they are known to the police of their respective home towns—Chicago and Brooklyn—as racketeers and alumni of the old Capone mob of terrorists.

* * *

Mr. Green knows all about them, and yet when proof is presented to the rank and file of the A. F. of L. and the general public of the character of his two respective colleagues in the higher councils of the A. F. of L. his answer is that "hireling propagandamongers" of enemies of labor are taking advantage of labor's schism to "smear the labor movement."

I take it that Mr. Green means me, and I am not going to let him get away with it. The disclosures regarding Bioff and Scalese were made in these lofty essays, and Mr. Green's reply suggests that I have a secret retainer from some mysterious anti-labor force to discredit unionism.

It is a sneak answer, because he resorts to insinuation, but I won't hold out for a direct charge. I challenge him on the insinuation to produce evidence that I have been hired by enemies of labor to smear the movement.

Under what bridge at what time of what night did what enemies of labor pay me how much to smear the movement, and if Mr. Green has the slightest evidence to support his insinuation why he is neglecting his duty to bat my ears down? He is paid to protect labor from its enemies, isn't he?

* * *

The truth is that I have done a service for organized labor in exposing vicious conditions in the union racket. Mr. Green knows that, revolting as these disclosures are, they are only a suggestion of the whole state of affairs, and he has become jumpy waiting for me to drop that other shoe.

As to that I will say that I am a centipede. I can keep on dropping shoes until Mr. Green gives some evidence of a sense of responsibility to the dues-paying workers and the public and a determination to clean the criminals out of the American Federation of Labor or until the A. F. of L. kicks him out and puts in some man who can and will.

That old stall of Mr. Green's that the constitution of the A. F. of L. forbids interference with the autonomy of the subsidiary unions has been used to cover the development in the United States of a system of brigandage and extortion closely akin to the Italian Mafia under which career men of the crime business prey on employes as well as employers.

They form conspiracies with employers to limit competition, and they rob the union members through extortionate dues, assessments and initiation fees and the practice of job-selling. The parent body enjoys a big, if not necessarily fine, reputation and has great political influence, and the charters which it issues thus can become, and, in many cases are, no better than licenses to rob and oppress. Embezzlement is by no means rare, but democracy is, and the autonomy gag is used by the parent organization to shirk the unpleasant duty of fighting notorious racketeers in the subsidiary unions.

It is used also to avoid the plain duty of any labor organization to protect individual workmen from cruel persecution by crooked officials of their locals or international as when a man appeals to Mr. Green's office and is told that the national body can't interfere with the judgment of the subsidiary bodies.

* * *

Mr. Green called on the national, state and local authorities to enforce the public laws against union officials who abuse their power, knowing, however, that union members are forbidden to appeal to the public authorities except in desperation, that anyone who does appeal to them will be smeared as a disrupter, scab, rat and fink, that the public authorities simply can't take over in detail the police duties of the unions, and that in many cases in such situations the victims runs the risk of being waylaid by murderers and beaten to death with a ball-bat. There are many precedents for that.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

By HEINZ HERALD

(The screen writer goes behind the scenes and considers research on historical films—for Robbin Coons, on vacation).

* * *

HOLLYWOOD—There is an old notion that history in motion pictures must, somehow, be phoney. But go into the offices of biographical story writers and you will find the walls lined with books, magazines, newspapers — research material not only about the man and his times, but also about the tools of his trade, no matter how scientific it may have been.

When I worked on the "Life of Emile Zola," I thought that the forty-seven books I had read about my subject was an all-time high for motion picture research. But a short time later I found out that it was a cinch to write about a man of letters compared with a man of science. This was sharply brought home to me when my friends, John Huston and Norman Burnside, and I, started to do a picture about the man who founded the school of chemical therapy and conquered many dread diseases—Paul Ehrlich.

* * *

Our work began with research about research. No biography of this medical genius exists. The material concerning his work and his life is scattered all over the world in hundreds of articles and papers. Only a few reveal anything about his personality, most of them deal exclusively with his scientific achievements. You have to read German, French and English even to get to these sources; moreover, you have to understand medical jargon. I assure you that to study all this is hard on the writer who usually works with human relationships. But there is no other way out, you have to burrow through these mountains of essays, to consult experts, to talk with people who may be able to tell you something about your hero personal traits and the job soon becomes fascinating. Of course, you digest far more knowledge than you put into your final script. You become the friend of your character; you start to live in this strange world.

* * *

Naturally, life is not a motion picture story. You cannot merely set down a record of events—you have to dramatize them. And here is where the difference between good and bad writing begins. A biographical writer may rearrange facts, even invent others; but he never distorts the "inner truth" of a story or a character.

The paramount need for this kind of writing is time—plenty of time. Sufficient research has to be done, the story has to ripen slowly; cooperation between the actor, Edward G. Robinson; the director, William Dieterle, and the writer has to be established. More than a year's time was allotted to the scrips of the Ehrlich film—proof that the producers appreciate the difficulties of the task.

With the new themes it has chosen, the motion picture industry has grown up to a new cultural standard.

CHINESE FIND NEW WAR SPIRIT AT CHUNGKING

Safely Hidden From Japanese Eyes, They Carry on Their Fight for Country.

(Editor's Note: How China's defenders are emulating American pioneer methods in carving out a new republic far in the interior is described today in the second of a series of six articles by James R. Young, International News Service manager in Tokyo, cabled to New York prior to his detention by Japanese authorities.)

By JAMES R. YOUNG

On the site of the old kingdom of Pah, 1,400 miles up the Yangtze river in China, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and his associates are laying plans today for renewed resistance against Japanese invaders in their 30th month of hostilities.

The place is Chungking, newest of creative government centers in the Far East resulting from the merciless undeclared war, now Chiang's capital and a beehive of activity.

Blessed with a protective fog and mist, and provided by nature with the best dugouts of any world capital, this seemingly characterless city of nearly half a million busy people was a revelation to me on a recent visit. It afforded an amazing contrast to dull Tokyo and the latter's burdened, bureaucratic methods.

Chungking in western China seems to re-enact Dodge City days and the opening of the Union Pacific in the United States.

Inside temporary buildings and jammed-up old three-story houses, a government of vitality, headed by many men new in government but efficient in business, moves quicker than any similar official bodies in Hsinking, the capital of Manchukuo, or in Japanese-occupied Nanking, where weeds and grass grow where traffic once stirred dust.

Chungking, the most moral and best behaved world capital, is reached by roads or by airline, or by infrequent boat operations. Travel goes downriver to Ichang, where still the Chinese hold out.

They will always hold out from Chungking. The city's half thousand dugouts, bored into solid rock, are practically impregnable. No enemy planes can find this city except for a few days in the year. A perpetual fog blankets the city at a low ceiling.

Backed into what the Japanese like to call the last corner of Szechuan province, the Chinese government is carrying a remarkable development of previously untouched natural resources. Two years and five months after the Japanese invasion of China, the Chinese have found an entirely new spirit. The Chungking spirit—and it spreads through all the other large west China cities—appeals to all American visitors and to the thousands of American-trained Chinese who are leading their country against Japan.

For a year or more the Chinese government officials have had to fight the Japanese on one hand, reorganize their own government, and especially important, get the cooperation of the local citizenry, including some 70,000,000 people of the state of Szechuan, a population equal to Japan and an area almost the size of Texas.

Suburban towns are being constructed. The main city geographically is larger in area than Shanghai. But its hills, steps, valleys and crowded conditions prevent local development. Chungking has been made a special municipality, separated from the state of Szechuan.

Safer from bombs, and healthier, outside areas will accommodate the mushroom growth of homes, offices, churches, hospitals, schools and universities.

Unlike the marvelous tailor-built city of Hsinking in Manchukuo, this old city with its outmoded architecture, pigs, geese and chickens in the muddy streets and its bombed business district, is prosperous. It is a frontier town suddenly flooded with private and government money. The Chinese hereabouts have never experienced such a phenomena.

Nearly 100 new plants have been opened. Skilled workers total nearly 60 per cent of the labor employed. Iron and steel plants are increasing. Native workmen are being trained. Coal is abundant. There is ample water supply for the growth of the city.

The state produces over a million tons of coal last year. In reserves, newly built transport facilities, and nearness to important industrial centers, Chungking's surrounding coal deposits are excellent. Some 300 coal mines are located on one of two river basins. Five mines are excellently equipped.

Many experts agree that Chungking will become the center for west China's heavy industries * * * these experts include hundreds of American-trained Chinese business men and technicians, heartened by the desire of Chinese financiers to invest in this newly opened country, on a scale not before associated with Szechuan.

Cotton spinning, weaving and embroidery establishments are flourishing and new ones building, with 15,000 spinning machines operating in the new province turning out cotton yarn.

Airlines connect all important areas of Free China. Mail operates fairly regularly. It is not uncommon, and probably a great surprise to the Japanese to know that mail is received and dispatched, not only in and out of Chungking but in all other large cities, direct into the Japanese occupied areas.

If the Chinese were once fighting among themselves, they are now united. More so in the past year than ever and this is true since Sept. 1 than at any time during hostilities. If Japan thinks Chungking has backsliders and pessimists, such a view is a mistake.

The pioneer and frontier spirit prevails.

Old Russia To Life.

The Russia of the czars—glittering aristocracy on one side, poverty-stricken peasantry on the other—has been brought to the screen in "Balalaika," the new and spectacular musical co-starring Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey which is showing at the Ohio theater, through Thursday. The recreation of a recent period in history that has been wiped out by revolution offered a production problem more difficult than pictures based on eras two and three hundred years ago. However, Count Andrey Tolstoy, who acted as technical advisor, said in commenting on the picture, "It is a source of great wonder to me that the technical department could build a production as accurate as this."

Jane Bryan Has Lead.

The gripping story of an innocent girl who gets into trouble and becomes "a girl on probation" is the picture showing at the Majestic theater with Jane Brown, Ronald Reagan, Shelia Bromley and Anthony Averill. "Girls on Probation" has a fine cast with the leading feminine role being played by Miss Bryan, who finds it difficult to lose the stigma of being a marked girl, despite the love and aid of a young lawyer, played by Ronald Reagan. How she eventually wins out over such adverse circumstances forms the basis of this powerfully human film. The second feature is "The Wizard of Oz," starring Judy Garland and many other notables.

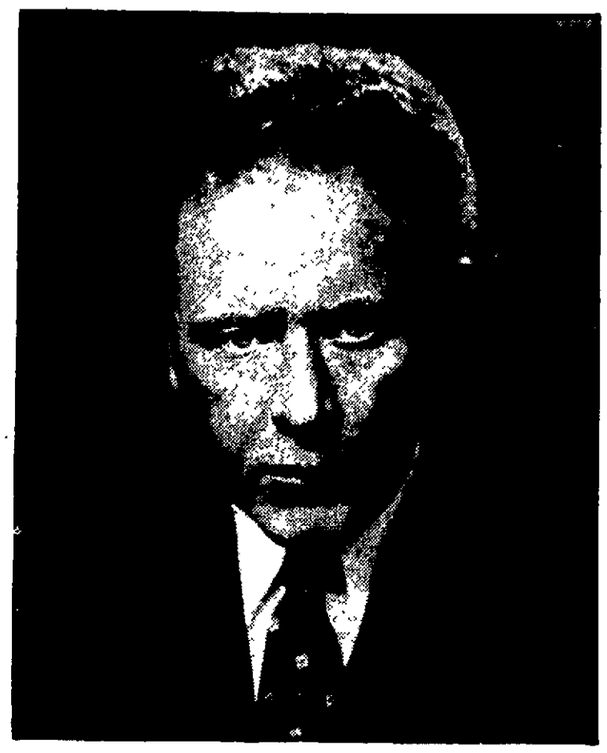
Symphony Organizer, Director



Dr. Hans Kindler, the man who organized the National Symphony in Washington, D. C., and built it up to a standard comparable with the great symphony groups of America, will conduct his orchestra at Senior high school tomorrow night as the second presentation on the Civic Music association program for the season. Dr. Kindler is a native of Holland.

ONLY 4 NUMBERS ON NATIONAL SYMPHONY PROGRAM TOMORROW

There will be only four numbers on the program of the National Symphony orchestra tomorrow night at Senior High school auditorium when that musical unit appears here on the Civic Music association program, but these will make a full and satisfying menu for music lovers.

Beethoven's 5th Symphony will make up the second half of the program. This was chosen because of its melodic themes and its universal appeal to both laymen and music technicians. The old Mansfield Symphony played the number here several years ago.

Their three numbers on the first half of the program are the Oberon overature by von Weber; "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" from Mozart; and excerpts from Moussorgsky's "Boris Godounov."

Dr. Hans Kindler, who organized the National Symphony, will conduct tomorrow night. The orchestra, while comparatively new, has won wide recognition in the nation's music circles.

If the weather is favorable it is expected that a number of Civic Music association members from Sandusky and Canton will attend the Mansfield concert.

GIFT OF CORN

Farmer Who Buys Millionth Bushel to Get Award.

When hybrid seed corn was introduced a few years ago farmers were skeptical, but the millionth bushel of Pfister corn—just one variety of hybrid—may be sold this week in Richland county.

C. A. Baker of R D 2, Greenwich, agent for the Pfister corn, has learned that some mid-western farmer will buy that millionth bushel in a few days and Baker wants it to be a farmer in Richland county.

Lester Pfister, who developed the corn named for him, will make a personal call on the farmer who buys the millionth bushel to congratulate him and present him with a gift of hybrid corn.

Pfister, who is known as the "Burbank of the Corn Fields," has also agreed to speak at a public meeting in the community where the corn is purchased.

EXCUSE FAILS

ST. LOUIS — (INS) — Charles Vitale's explanation that he turned to bootlegging because he was not getting enough on relief to support himself, his wife and six children didn't carry much weight with United States District Judge J. Caskie Collet. The judge sentenced Vitale to a year and a day in prison on a plea of guilty to possessing and selling untaxed alcohol.

Britisher Finds a Substitute For Gas to Run Auto

WOLVERHAMPTON, Eng. — (INS)—The fact that gasoline rationing here was upsetting his business plans set W. A. Hayward, a local business man, thinking.

He has now discovered a way of running his car on gas from—firewood!

Ash or beech wood is put in a circular steel gas producer fitted to the car, and takes two minutes to light. Hayward is then all set for a 200-mile journey, at one-fifth of what it would cost him on gasoline.

It cost him $60 to adapt his car.

Scouts Go to Polls to Elect Own Officials to 'Run' City

Politics entered the Mansfield scene again today as the annual Boy Scout election to select scouts to "run" the city for one day during National Boy Scout week, Feb. 8 to 14, got under way.

Thirty-six candidates chosen in a primary conducted last week, will be seeking nearly every major city office on the Federalist and Nationalist tickets.

Heading the contests will be the race for mayor by Nationalist James Gadfield of troop 5 and Richard Weaver of troop 2, who heads the Federalist ticket.

Other candidates on the Nationalist ticket are, Robert Whyte, municipal judge; Larry Bergstrom, service director; Fred Jones, auditor; Charles Hayes, city engineer; Robert Pfahler, solicitor; Richard Lisle, police chief; Robert Pore, fire chief; James Gardner, clerk of council; Robert Cupp, president of council; Cy Messimer, Edwin Snouffer and William Wervy, councilmen-at-large, and the following ward councilmen, Donald Johnson, first, William Dent, second, James Weber, third, Dean Hemperley, fourth, and Howard Kennedy, sixth.

Running with Weaver on the Federalist ticket are, Ralph Hill, municipal judge; Robert Burns, service director; Lee Adams, auditor; Robert Stevenson, city engineer; William Maxwell, solicitor; Morton Frankel, police chief; Fred Morey, fire chief; Wayne Sweval, president of council; William Gandert, clerk of council; Scott Keller, James Terry and Ned Kell, councilmen-at-large, and the following ward councilmen, Joe Nixon, first, Robert Black, second, Richard James, third, Richard Depue, fourth, and Leonard Wappner, sixth.

The election will continue through Friday night, with scouts casting their ballots during the regular meetings of their troops.

The Federalists campaigned on a platform that proposes to maintain law and order by the proper enforcement of existing laws and ordinances; find a satisfactory solution of the present traffic problem; endorse a dial telephone system; year-round sports and recreational program; place all department heads and employes under civil service; work for the construction of overhead crossing at the B. & O. crossing on West Fourth street; work for an adequate water and sewer system; a public auditorium, and aid in the development of the city airport.

Proposals on the Nationalist platform are: traffic enforcement around schools; for better Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A.; shorter hours for firemen; adequate water supply and a better sewage disposal; city parking lots for the downtown district; provide for a law that requires everyone owning a bicycle to have a license; a bicycle court for bicycle traffic violations; addition of a white light to traffic lights for pedestrians.

CENSUS TAKERS FACE HAZARDS

Enumerators Must Travel by Dogsled, Airplane, Boat and Snowshoes to Do Job.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — U. S. census bureau officials have been forced to work out special and sometimes bizarre techniques to take the 1940 census in Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Alaska and other outlying areas.

Census taking in continental United States began Jan. 2 but in Alaska work commenced last October because of climatic conditions. Some temporal adjustments also had to be made in other outlying areas.

Enumerators must travel by dogsled, airplane, boat and snowshoe to canvass residents of frigid and sparsely-settled sections of Alaska, while others, in densely-populated, tropical Puerto Rico, must make their way much of the time by horseback and afoot.

Like Puerto Rico, Hawaii's climate is always sunny and warm, but unlike the Caribbean island, Hawaii is sparsely settled and much of the territory is covered with a heavy tropical growth. Enumerators will travel much of the way by horse or automobile.

The Panama Canal Zone offers a problem of its own. Consisting of a strip of territory extending five miles on either side of the canal, enumerators often are required to reach the populace in the remote areas by native boats, known as "cayucas." Settlements often are located in the jungle along the waterway.

Travel difficulties are not the only problems that beset census takers. In Hawaii, for example, there is a language problem. The 1930 census showed that the island's population consisted chiefly of such diverse groups as Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese, Koreans, Puerto Ricans, Filipinos, Negroes, Hawaiians, Caucasian-Hawaiians, Asiatic-Hawaiians and Spanish.

STUDY TABLES

BOSTON — (INS) — Because they finished their homework, Mary and Johnny may go out "stepping" tonight. To enable students to get a start on their home lessons, the Boston and Maine railroad has placed study tables in the main waiting room of North station. This convenience is believed to be the first of the sort ever provided by an American railroad.

IN THE RUHL BOOK

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sports Editor

CLAIMS of a precise relation between football records and college enrollment have little if any basis in fact, according to a recent survey conducted among the ten members of the Western Conference by Conference offices.

Such claims have emanated from critics of the college sport who have contended that enrollment decreases in the college producing a winning football team. The study, comparing total resident enrollment with team ranking for the previous Conference football season, shows no basis for a definite correlation between football success and enrollment increase or decrease.

Results of the study are accompanied by the statement that "there is some reason to believe that even though a winning team does not cause an increased enrollment the following year, good athletics tend to attract some students who are fond of sports. On the other hand, a university that has no athletics or that sponsors teams that are, year after year, hopelessly outclassed by rival institutions will probably attract the type of students not interested in sports activities."

The accompanying statement adds, "It has been pointed out that there are two types of college student: the contemplative, meditative or philosophical type, and the executive type. The executive must make decisions quickly, meet changing conditions readily, and apply the results of his knowledge and training. Although some athletes have been great scholars, generally speaking the athlete is of the executive rather than the philosophical type.

"Most of our universities that consider their essential function the serving of a democratic society strive to send out into the world both the executive and the philosophical type."

HE SHOULD WORRY

With all his football knowledge,
Will have to make his comeback stand

But he should worry, for well he knows
He's always welcome with the pros.

Yes, Fellows, But Yanks Failed to Draw 'Em.

THOSE who advise Joe DiMaggio believe that among the numerous arguments in his favor in his fight to get a $40,000 contract from the Yankees is a slight easing of the financial pressure on the New York club.

They believe the hard-hitting outfielder is entitled to some of the dough the world's champions are going to save through the retirement of Gehrig, who last year received $34,000.

It wasn't until the highly paid Babe Ruth had quit the New Yorkers that Lou began to get what he really deserved.

In the minds of those who run the Yankees, the DiMaggio situation presents no analogy. They point out that in 1935, with a club winning its fourth straight pennant, a team hailed as the all-time miracle of the game, the Yankees failed to draw 1,000,000 customers in the Stadium.

They were outdrawn by the third-place Brooklyn Dodgers, with a club hardly as strong as the Bronx Bombers.

Once again the payroll of the New York club will go over the $300,000 level, and that means a heavy hand in dealing with holdouts who may prove somewhat numerous and, perhaps, insistent.

The only player whom the Yankees recognize as being worth an increase is First Baseman Dahlgren, who stepped into Gehrig's spot and gave the most polished defensive demonstration in the majors. Dahlgren also drove in 88 runs, despite a low batting average.

State Signs Purdue

Fills Vacant Chicago Date With Big Ten Opponent; Clash Oct. 5.

COLUMBUS (AP) — Addition of Purdue to Ohio State university's 1940 football schedule gives the Big Ten champions a promise of one of the "toughest" seasons in years.

Purdue was selected to fill an open date Oct. 5 in Columbus and round out the Buckeyes' customary six western conference contests in an eight-game schedule.

* * *

Both Purdue and Ohio State were left with schedule vacancies by the University of Chicago's withdrawal from Big Ten football competition.

* * *

Texas A. and M. refused an invitation to meet Ohio State in Columbus Oct. 5 because of a commitment to play U.C.L.A. in Los Angeles the following week. The complete 1940 Ohio State schedule:

Sept. 28, Pittsburgh; Oct. 5, Purdue; Oct. 12, at Northwestern; Oct. 19, Minnesota; Oct. 26, at Cornell; Nov. 2, Indiana; Nov. 9, open; Nov. 16, at Illinois; Nov. 23, Michigan.

Diz' Unsigned Contract Back in Cubs' Hands.

CHICAGO — (INS) — Dizzy Dean's unsigned 1940 contract was back in the hands of the Chicago Cubs for a second time today. With the contract the pitcher sent Owner P. K. Wrigley a letter which was presumed to list in detail his reasons for believing that a salary slash from $20,000 to about $10,000 would be too harsh.

Wrigley said Dean wrote that he "feels fine" after having recovered from his recent joust with a dentist. The pitcher had an impacted wisdom tooth removed in the belief the ailing molar may have had something to do with his arm troubles of the past two seasons.

Ambers Picks Henry to Win

Others Say He's Slipping, Favor Montanez.

NEW YORK — (AP) — On the theory that the way to find out who will win the Henry Armstrong-Pedro Montanez welterweight championship fight at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night is to ask a fellow who has fought them both, Lou Ambers is hereby given the floor.

* * *

Lou holds the lightweight championship, which he lost to Armstrong in 1938 and won back from him a year later. He also has tackled the Puerto Rican puncher twice, losing a non-title bout in 1937, but winning when the crown was at stake. In those four fights he must have learned quite a bit about the two battlers.

* * *

Ambers, to get right down to cases, picks Henry the Hammer to retain his title. There are many other opinions floating around. Some say Armstrong is slipping, and that he never has had a really tough fight in defense of his 147-pound crown, even though he will be putting it on the block for the 15th time in tomorrow's 15-round scrap.

CLOSE SEASON WITH SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — The University of Notre Dame will wind up its 1940 football season against Southern California, one of the two schools which beat the Irish last fall. The Southern California tilt at Los Angeles Dec. 7 will end a schedule of nine games, four at home. Others:

County League Tilts Hold Interest Friday Night

WHILE Mentor Vern Hoffman sends his Mansfield high court proteges against the Bellevue high quintet at Bellevue Friday night, county court fans will have an opportunity to feast on an appetizing Richland county league cage menu.

* * *

Topping the circuit's three-game program will be the meeting between undefeated Bellville and the Lucas Cubs at Lucas. The Bluejays will be after their eighth straight league triumph.

* * *

Other county contests Friday finds the Lexington Minutemen invading Ontario and Butler, sporting a four-game winning streak, entertaining Union high.

On the cage front tonight are tussles between Tiro and Plymouth at Tiro and Greenwich and Nova on the latter's floor.

Wednesday night the Madison Rams will be seeking revenge when they trek to Londonville to tackle the Red Birds. Loudonville defeated the Rams on the Madison court recently.

Mansfield's Tygers are expected to face another difficult assignment in Bellevue. The Bellevue combine is one of the northern Ohio powers.

The Mansfield-Bellevue will have some bearing on the Tygers chances of successfully defending their district championship this spring. Bellevue lost to Mansfield in the finals last year.

Interest in the Bellville-Lucas tussle will center on Bill Martin, Bluejay center, who is pacing the league's individual scoring race. He has averaged 15 points a game.

* * *

Mt. Vernon, only unbeaten North Central Ohio conference five, moves into Ashland in the headline conference setto Friday night. The Yellow Jackets have won nine in a row. In the other NCO affairs, Shelby plays hosts to Marion Harding and Galion goes to Bucyrus.

* * *

North Fairfield will be at Shiloh and Plymouth at Greenwich in Twin-Valley league games Friday.

The Crestline Onondages, winner of their last seven games, plays Fostoria St. Wendelin at Crestline Friday and invades Fremont to play St. Joseph's Saturday night.

New Cleveland Player Signs 1940 Contract.

CLEVELAND — (U.P.) — Roy (Beau) Bell, new Cleveland outfielder, today had agreed to a 1940 contract less than 48 hours after he was acquired by the Indians from Detroit. Bell who had been a holdout with Detroit accepted terms via telephone from his home at New Braunfels, Texas.

Ashland Entertains Wooster Tonight

COLUMBUS — (UP) — Ohio conference title ambitions of two seasoned basketball outfits will be laid on the block tonight when Wooster tangles with Ashland at Ashland.

Wooster, the defending league champion, has sailed through four conference tilts without a blemish this season. Ashland also is flying high with four conference triumphs in a row after losing two December games. A defeat will toss Ashland entirely out of the race while a Wooster setback would leave Muskingum and Toledo alone in the undefeated class.

BEVELL, CANNON SIGN CINCINNATI CONTRACTS

CINCINNATI (AP) — Player contracts No. 24 and 25 were in the safe of the Cincinnati baseball office today.

Russell Bevell, rookie infielder purchased from New Orleans, became the 25th Redleg to sign shortly after the contract of John Cannon, pitching recruit from Albany, was received. Bevell batted .326 last year while Cannon won 12 and lost 10 games.

YANKS SEVER WORKING AGREEMENT WITH AKRON

DURHAM, N. C. (AP) — A recent ruling by Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis led the New York Yankees today to seek return of seven working agreements with farm organizations from W. G. At the same time the Yankees' secretary, George M. Weiss asked clarification of Landis' ruling.

Mephisto Again Loses to Champ

Incapacitates Self to Drop Last Fall and Match to Weidner at Armory.

ONLY one man among the 1,321 customers and chiselers assembled at Tim Nolan's Quality club wrestling show last night didn't know that the Great Mephisto had Billy Weidner pinned to the mat a full ten seconds in the third and deciding fall of their match.

And because this one man, Referee Clete Kauffman, was denied that knowledge, Billy Weidner is still junior heavyweight champion of the world and the Great Mephisto the first challenger—the same position they held two weeks ago before their last two scraps.

* * *

Of course, you can hardly blame Kauffman for not knowing much about the whole affair—only a few seconds before Mephisto had floored him with a terrific right to the jaw as Kauffman tried to prevent the Great One from pummeling Weidner on the ropes.

* * *

So Kauffman, prone on the canvas, didn't care much about what Mephisto was doing to Weidner. That is, he didn't until a few minutes later when Mephisto picked Weidner up, hurled him downward in a pile driver, only to hit himself in the groin with Weidner's head and incapacitate himself for further duty.

The decision, naturally, went to the champion because Mephisto couldn't continue.

What a battle it was from start to finish! Weidner took the first fall after 25 minutes of furious battling with a toe hold from a shoulder stand. Both of the boys took plenty of punishment, and it was anyone's fall right up to the final second. Both retired bloody from the ring.

Mephisto, apparently angered by the rough treatment the champ had been giving him in the clinches, came out for the second fall with a vengeance. He threw Weidner about the ring, then effectively resisted the champ's airplane spin and won the fall with a pile driver which left Billy unconscious.

You know about the final fall which gave the Midwest Wrestling association gold belt to Weidner, but you may not have heard how Mephisto punished the champ. Practically no one, your correspondent included, expected that finish.

* * *

In the semi-final, the villainous Masked Marvel took two out of three falls from Charley Layden of Fort Wayne. The Marvel took the first tilt in 14 minutes with a reverse crab. Layden took the second in six minutes, while the Marvel came came back to take the deciding fall in 7 minutes.

* * *

Payoff came in the final bout of the Marvel-Layden tilt when Layden, warned to break because Marvel was in the ropes, turned his back, walked to his corner. He was attacked from the rear, thrown and pinned, while several fans tried to get in the ring and get at the referee whom they thought had awarded Layden the decision.

Bud Steele, popular Mansfield boy, and Frank Vanderbilt, Plymouth lad, fought to a sensational 30-minute draw. Both boys were popular with the fans and Vanderbilt showed a nice arm whip.—By J. M.

Martin Leads Scoring Race

Bellville Star Averaged 15 Points Per Game.

Averaging 15 points per game, Bill Martin, crack center of the undefeated Bellville high Bluejays, holds a 29-point lead over his nearest rival in the Richland county league individual scoring race, according to figures compiled today.

* * *

Martin, who has participated in seven circuit contests, had pumped in 44 field goals and 17 free throws for a 105 total. His closest opponent is Dave Grubb, Butler pivot man, with 76 points, tallied in eight games.

* * *

Bill Shaffer, Lexington Minuteman forward, and Lawrence Franks, Lucas guard, are giving Grubb a battle for the runner-up position. Shaffer has 70 points, while Franks trails him with 62.

Players scoring 30 or more points follows:

EX-INDIAN GETS $20,000 FOR LOSS OF LEFT HAND

SEMINOLE, Okla.—(AP)—Hugh "Red" Alexander, former Cleveland Indians outfielder, has been given a $20,000 judgment in his $90,500 suit over the loss of his left hand in a 1938 accident.

Alexander played with Cleveland in 1937 and since losing his hand has acted as a scout for the club. He declared his hand was crushed in an engine in trying to start a pump at an oil lease near here. The jury verdict was returned against E. W. Jones, Inc. A suit against the Stano-Lind and Amerada Oil companies, also named defendants, was dismissed.

Phoenix Added To Red System

Brings Number of Clubs In Chain to Seven.

CINCINNATI —(AP)— Addition of the Phoenix club of the Arizona-Texas league to the Cincinnati Reds farm system was announced last night by General Manager Warren C. Giles.

Two provisions, however, were that the league go to six clubs and that a satisfactory lease for the Phoenix ball park can be negotiated.

There was a marked lack of further comment from the soft-spoken front office pilot as he explained the Reds farm system following a crackdown last week on farm operations by Judge Kenesaw M. Landis.

* * *

Judge Landis declared 91 wards of the Detroit Tigers, with an estimated value of $500,000, free agents and ordered the club to pay a total of $47,250 to a group of former players. The commissioner simultaneously issued a blast against "abuses" and "evils" of player dealings.

* * *

While other clubs were "walking softly" a few days later, Giles took sharp issue with the baseball czar, declaring that the farm system was a great boon to baseball if operated properly.

The Phoenix deal brings to seven the number of clubs in the Reds' farm system. Others are Durham of the Piedmont league, Columbia of the Sally, Birmingham in the Southern Association, Indianapolis in the American Association and teams at Ogden, Utah, and Bassett, Va.

Honus Signs 29th Contract

PITTSBURGH —(AP)— The indestructible Honus Wagner, one of the great names of baseball and practically permanent part of the Pittsburgh Pirates, yesterday signed his 29th major league contract.

The bow-legged, now gray-haired but vigorous old veteran of the National League, who got his start in baseball in Mansfield, O., first signed a major circuit contract on July 19, 1897.

That brought him up from the Paterson, N. J. club of the old Atlantic League to the Louisville Nationals, whose franchise later was purchased by the Pittsburgh Pirates.

He signed 20 more contracts until he closed his playing career in 1917, at the age of 43. He then played ten years of semi-pro ball, but the famous flying dutchman couldn't retire and in 1933 was brought back as a Pirate coach.

They'll Bet a Billion In '40, Bookies Estimate.

NEW YORK —(INS)— Nobody knows how much money will be wagered on sports events alone in the United States this year but the most conservative estimate made by any of a score of leading bookies today set the figure at $1,000,000,000.

A billion dollars or more than enough to pay off the war debt of several small European nations! And yet most of the bookies scoffed at such a "piker's" estimate.

These scoffers said that when the New York race tracks get the mutuels which the state legislature is considering today they will handle at least $600,000,000 between spring and fall.

NILE KINNICK AWARDED CAMP MEMORIAL TROPHY

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Nile Kinnick of Iowa University, voted the outstanding football player of 1936, today added the Walter Camp Memorial trophy to his collection.

Kinnick was awarded the trophy at the annual Touchdown club dinner attended last night by football greats and former greats. Ken Kavannaugh, Louisiana State University end, was awarded the Knute Rockne memorial trophy as the outstanding lineman of the year.

LITTLE LEADS FIELD FOR BING CROSBY AWARD

LOS ANGELES —(AP)— Lawson Little, ex-amateur king competing now from Bretton Woods, N. H., leads the field for the Bing Crosby trophy, which goes to the golfer compiling the low aggregate score in the 12 rounds of medal play on California's "golden golf trail."

Little's average in the Los Angeles and Oakland opens and the 36-hole qualifying rounds of the San Francisco match play tourney is 71.7 per round. His total is 709.

Riggs Praises Don McNeill

Sees Kenyon College Star Coming to Front.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—(AP)—Bobby Riggs' recent tennis defeats have convinced him that he will have to hustle to stay at the front of the ambitious amateur pack.

"I'm going to have my hands full," he said here between practice licks. "I played my best in those tournaments, and although I undoubtedly was off form it means that I can't afford to slip even a little or those fellows will be giving me trouble."

* * *

The 21-year-old champion, honeymooning here with his bride of a month, the former Catherine Ann Fischer of Chicago, lost recently in successive tournaments to Don McNeill, Bitsy Grant and Henry Prusoff.

* * *

The champion was lavish in his praise of McNeill, who is ranked third on the national list.

"McNeill is a hard-driving, steady player," said Riggs, "and his unorthodox backhand makes him tough to beat. He has been going along at about the same pace for two or three years and it may be that he is getting that little spark that he has needed."

Bobby disagreed with Don Budge's opinion that amateur tennis was slipping.

HEIR BATTLES IN COURT TO RETAIN WHITE SOX

CHICAGO —(INS)— Whether the Chicago White Sox should be sold rested with a probate court judge today as Mrs. J. Louis Comiskey, widow of the late owner of the American league baseball club, reiterated her determination to fight by all legal means against disposal of the club.

As trustee of Comiskey's estate, the First National Bank of Chicago filed with Probate Judge John F. O'Connell a petition asking permission to sell, as a block, the 7,450 shares of stock in the White Sox left by Comiskey in trust for his widow and three children. The block represents all shares in the club except 50 held by Harry Grabiner, White Sox secretary.

Attorney Thomas J. Sheehan, representing the Comiskey heirs, filed notice of opposition to the bank's petition, and won a continuance on the action until Feb. 29, when a hearing will be held.

REVEALS BORAH MASTER-MINDED COURT BATTLE

Writer Friend Says Senator Got Biggest Thrills as Congress Strategist.

(Editor's Note—One of the late Senator Borah's greatest strokes of leadership was his "masterminding" of the famous supreme court fight of 1937. To his close friend, William K. Hutchinson, chief of the Washington bureau of International News Service, Borah daily related the "behind-the-scenes" activity during the 166 history-making days of that battle. The following article, the third of a series, deals with heretofore unpublished details of Borah's part in that epic fight.)

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

WASHINGTON — (INS) — William Edgar Borah won international renown as an isolation statesman and orator but he got his biggest thrills as a master strategist in congressional warfare.

Borah won the greatest legislative victory of his battle-studded career when he master-minded the senate forces that defeated President Roosevelt's supreme court bill in early 1937. So he told me time and time again.

Borah placed the supreme court fight even above defeat of Wilson's league of nations proposal because he believed the former involved the integrity of the federal judiciary and thereby the preservation of democracy itself in the United States.

I consulted Borah daily during the court battle. He told me of every happening behind the scenes. I made notes as he spoke. Once he stopped me and I told him I was making the notes for history—possibly to publish in a book after the fight ended. He agreed and later, often brought notes he had made himself for me to copy.

Directed Every Move.

Borah actually led that fight, though Senators Burton K. Wheeler (D) of Montana, Frederick Van Nuys (D) of Indiana, and a dozen other shared the leadership. But it was Borah who made and kept the opposition nonpartisan, though he agreed the Republican party would lose the greatest issue in all its history.

Borah directed every strategical move. He rallied the opposition in its dark hours. He silenced former President Herbert Hoover and the 1936 GOP nominee, Alf M. Landon. He influenced the retirement of Justice Willis Van Devanter at a crisis in the battle. And he helped write the final judiciary committee report that condemned the president's plan in words that will ring through history.

But first, Borah's campaign among Republicans—

Four nights before the president disclosed his closely-guarded secret by sending his supreme court bill to congress, Borah made a nation-wide radio address anticipating the battle. I asked him repeatedly, not once, but scores of times in the following years, whether he had really been tipped off to Roosevelt's plan. Always he replied:

"I knew he was up to something."

In that speech, the night of February 1, 1937, Borah defended the integrity of the federal judiciary and declared "free government courts removed from the turmoil and bitterness of politics are indispensable to the rights and liberty of the citizen, particularly the citizen who is without political influence and power."

Then, giving the key to his own strategy later in the court fight, he said: "It would be serious error if not a fatal mistake to regard these questions touching the integrity of the constitution and the independence of the court as party questions or to seek to treat them as such."

Leaders Meet With Him.

On February 5, the president sent his bill to congress. The next day the Republican senate leaders met in Borah's office to consider strategy. Two prominent Republicans urged the bill be made a party issue, one saying:

"We've got to take it to the country. This issue will wreck Roosevelt and the Democratic party."

The other urged: "We might as well because we can't beat it. The president will get what he wants and Republicans might as well capitalize on it."

Borah replied:

"This issue is bigger than the Republican party. We must save the supreme court. Our Republican form of government cannot survive without an independent judiciary.

"The only chance of beating this measure is to let the Democrats fight it out. We must throw our support to the opposition. We must take our orders from the Democrats, who oppose the bill.

"The moment one of us goes out to the country with this issue, it will become a partisan fight. That is all the president wants.

"Gentlemen, we must sacrifice every party advantage even if our party never returns to power, and stand with the Democrats who are willing to save our courts."

Senator Charles L. McNary, Republican leader of the senate, immediately agreed with him. So Borah determined the GOP strategy. And incidentally he coined the slogan—"save our courts."

Gets Hoover Message.

In the second week of February, Borah told me Mark Sullivan had visited him with a "personal message from Hoover." This message was that Roosevelt had made the "first major tactical mistake" of his tenure and that it was time for Hoover and Borah "jointly to take the issue to the country." Sullivan added that Mr. Hoover felt only Borah and himself carried enough weight to make the issue effective and that Mr. Hoover felt the Republican party could return to power on the single issue.

Borah told me he sent this reply to Hoover:

"Mr. Hoover is right. Roosevelt did raise a tremendous issue but we can't make it a party issue. That would be betrayal of the country.

"We (Republicans) have only 16 votes in the senate and we must get Democratic votes and we must let the Democrats run this fight.

"The Republicans must give up a tremendous party advantage possibly the greatest party advantage

The Russian invasion, we read, is chasing reindeer out of Finland. Now that Christmas is over, it seems Stalin isn't afraid to make Santa Claus angry.

• • •

Some folks read all those communiques issued by the warring European governments. Others prefer to stick to the old-fashioned fairy tales.

• • •

Among the many captives the Finns have taken there has been no mention, oddly enough, of Stalin's goat.

• • •

The nightly blackouts, according to a dispatch from England, is making Londoners grouchy. How come the censor didn't keep that dark?

Two Canadian towns are in a controversy over which has the coldest weather. That's one argument it ought to be fun to lose.

STOCK ISSUES ADVANCE AFTER SLOW START

Steels Lead Selective Revival: Fractional Gains Dominate Hesitant Market.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stocks did a little better in today's market after considerable hesitancy at the start.

Steels led the selective revival, along with a handful of specialties. Gains mostly were in fractions, however, and activity small.

Among issues supported were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck and Douglas Aircraft.

Lockheed slipped a shade to around 29 as the company placed 225,000 shares of additional common through an underwriting syndicate at $28.50 a share. Books were closed before 10 a. m. on the offering which, it was announced, was heavily oversubscribed.

Lightness of selling volume in yesterday's session, in the face of skidding steel production and softening of copper and zinc prices, was said to have inspired some of the initial buying on the theory the stock list may be at or near bottom. Bonds and commodities were irregularly lower.

Among items considered by market analysts were:

The condition statement of weekly reporting member banks in 101 cities for the week ended Jan. 17, disclosed a drop of $33,000,000 in commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of which New York City accounted for $21,000,000. Loans to brokers and dealers in all centers also fell $25,000,000.

The American Telephone and Telegraph company was reported to have projected a 20 per cent expansion in construction expenditures in the first quarter over the comparable period last year. Outlays were said to total $85,000,000 compared with $69,879,000 in 1939 and $77,622,000 in the 1938 months.

MILLIONTH
Bushel of Pfister Hybrids to Be Sold Soon . .
It's tagged and bagged right this second . . . somewhere in the corn belt, ready to be sold. It's the one-millionth bushel of Genuine Pfister Hybrids and will be purchased by some as yet unknown farmer between now and January 27. The Pfister organization considers this a signal occasion. To mark it as such, Lester Pfister will call in person and present—as a gift—up to ten bushels of Genuine Pfister Hybrids to the farmer purchasing this millionth bushel. One million bushels of hybrid seed is a lot of corn — testimony demonstrating the faith corn belt farmers place in the Pfister name and trademark.

FIRE DAMAGES NEW BUNGALOW, LOSS COVERED

Perry Township Couple Busy In New Home When Blaze Breaks Out.

ASHLAND—Mr. and Mrs. Dale Ungerer of Perry township, near the Wayne county line were getting ready to move into their new house Sunday, in fact, they were in it laying down the linoleum, but unaware that an overheated furnace was already doing extensive damage in the basement.

They discovered the fire too late, and by the time the Ashland county community fire truck arrived from Ashland, the new bungalow was in flames, and there was not much firemen could do about it.

The loss, mostly to the structure, as not many household goods had been moved in yet, was covered by insurance.

IN SHERIFF RACE

ASHLAND— Two Republicans, Perry Welch and C. W. Mowery have entered the race for Ashland county sheriff, it has been announced here through the county election board.

The two are now circulating petitions for the nominations in the May primaries.

U. S. Note Hits at 'Discrimination.'

WASHINGTON—(AP)—United States' protests to Great Britain over wartime measures increased today with an objection against "discriminatory" treatment of American ships in the Mediterranean and disclosure of an unpublished note on commerce with neutrals.

Secretary Hull said in a formal note to Lord Lothian, the British ambassador, that the American government "feels constrained to express its serious concern at the treatment by the British authority of American shipping in the Mediterranean area, and particularly at Gibraltar."

It asserted there had been discrimination against American ships at Gibraltar in that they were held an average of 12.4 days, more than three times the average period of detention of Italian vessels, and that their cargoes were given less favorable consideration than similar Italian cargoes.

"This government must expect that the British government will at least take suitable and prompt measures to bring about an immediate correction of this situation," Hull's note said.

The document revealed the fact that the United States had addressed a note to Britain on Nov. 20, questioning the legality of interference by the British government with cargoes moving from one neutral country to another.

Tokyo Sternly Warns Britain.

TOKYO—(INS)—Great Britain today was asked in stern language to avoid any repetition of the "disagreeable action" involved in the seizure of potential German belligerents from the liner Asama Maru.

While hundreds of Japanese civilians demonstrated in front of the British embassy, and the angry press threatened "retaliation," well-informed sources said the navy decided to take measures to prevent any recurrence.

Amid the mounting Japanese indignation, Haruhiko Nishi, director of the European and eastern Asiatic division of the foreign office, invited the counsellor of the British embassy to a conference at which Nishi amplified the Japanese protest to London.

Nishi, it was understood, asked the British not to try similar action against several Japanese vessels due to arrive at Yokohama tomorrow and Thursday.

Nishi said removal of 21 Germans from the Asama Maru had "aroused the Japanese nation to a large degree," adding the situation might take an unfortunate turn unless Britain handled the affair "discreetly."

(British authorities in London charged that the German embassy in Tokyo was playing an active behind-the-scenes part in the affair.)

While Japanese authorities waited impatiently for a response to the protest from London, it was necessary to lock the gates of the British embassy to keep out the swarm of demonstrators, and police were placed on guard.

field last year than in 1938 and the loss was $2,500 above the 1938 figure.

Last year the department responded to 240 fires in which the total loss amounted to $33,-161, Seeburger said, as compared with a loss of $33,454 in 1938 from 217 fires.

The annual report covers only the fires within the city limits and does not include the loss from fires in Madison township, where the city has a contract for the fire department to answer fire calls

Reviewing the cause of all fires reported inside the city in 1938, the report disclosed that as in the past, the most common cause was defective wiring which was responsible for 28 fires, while other causes included overheated stoves and furnaces, sparks from chimneys and cigarets dropped in automobiles or on furniture.

Wolfe and the Richland county commissioners were opposed to the special elections because no funds were appropriated to finance them. Cost to the county is expected to be between $6,000 and $7,000.

Must File By Saturday.

Filing deadline for candidates who will enter the special Feb. 6 primary had been set today for 6:30 p. m. Saturday, Clerk A. F. Porter of the county election board said. It was stated yesterday that the deadline would be at noon Saturday.

Porter said voters can register for the primary until 6:30 p. m. Wednesday, Jan. 31, five days preceding the special primary. Following the special election, registrations will be taken for the Feb. 27 election until 6:30 p. m. Feb. 21.

Applications for sick and absentee ballots for the special primary must be submitted to the election board not later than noon Feb. 3 and voted and returned by noon Monday, Feb. 5, Porter said.

Election board officials said today that 15,618 Mansfielders are registered and eligible to vote in the special elections. That total is nearly 4,000 less than the city's all-time high established two years ago before the city school bond election.

Acting on instructions received from Gov. John W. Bricker, Sheriff E. P. Long prepared today to post notices of the special Feb. 6 primary at the courthouse and city building and insert advertisements in county newspapers. The state law provides that sheriffs must publicize special elections in their counties.

Revives Old City Law to Curb Use of Fire Hydrants

An old city ordinance was revived today by Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton in an effort to curb the use of city fire hydrants by persons other than firemen. Fire Chief Charles Seeburger charged the promiscious opening of hydrants caused some of them to freeze during the sub-zero wave last week.

The ordinance forbids anyone to open or use a fire hydrant without permission from the fire chief, and provides a maximum $50 fine and costs for persons violating it.

Letters were sent today to heads of other city departments and WPA officials pointing out that opening of the city hydrants will no longer be tolerated.

Crafton said that this also applied to building contractors who pay no attention to the regulation. He said that the first one reported opening a hydrant will be brought into court.

Bromfield Considers Buying 1,000-Acre Ranch in Utah.

Louis Bromfield, Richland county novelist who has garnered more nation-wide publicity in the past few weeks than Sally Rand, was back in the news today with a story from Hollywood which says he thinks he might like to be a rancher as well as a farmer.

An Associated Press dispatch from the film capital say that Bromfield is considering the purchase of a 1,000-acre ranch near St. George, Utah, as a place to raise Palomino horses and prize beef stock. He spent some time in Utah last spring while collecting data for a screen play based on the life of Brigham Young.

Bromfield recently got a lot of national publicity when he accepted, declined, accepted and finally declined a bid from Ashland county politicians to run in the Democratic primary race for congress from the 17th district.

Today he became a member of the Mansfield lodge, Loyal Order of Moose. A check for his membership dues arrived today.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with constipation is get at its cause. That way you don't have to endure it first and try to "cure" it afterward—you can avoid having it.

Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this is what you lack, try crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains just the "bulk" you need.

Eat All-Bran often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Bob Allen's Last Interview With Senator Borah

Enjoy the zero temperatures while you can—you'll soon be complaining about the excessive heat.

Most of the Communists produced so far in this country seem to belong in a home for the feeble-minded.

Study of Stalin's brow is being recommended as an example of the type of early mankind struggling toward civilization.

Browder Convicted, Sentenced

CONVICTION of Earl Browder, American-born Communist leader, on charges of passport fraud, tends to reveal the small regard which this man has held for laws of the United States as he acknowledged having traveled incognito to attend conferences with Soviet leaders in Moscow.

In court yesterday Browder pleaded his own case and contended he was being made a victim of a campaign against "civil rights."

In a nation of 130,000,000 people it is quite natural that some thousands of malcontents should be impressed with such leadership as that of Browder, but that he and his handful of followers should be tolerated at all is a tribute to the spirit of democracy, and protection of minority rights, which are strongly emphasized in the United States.

With conviction and sentencing of Browder for falsifying passport applications, and of Fritz Kuhn, Nazi bund leader, as a common thief, the character of leadership in these alien isms has been more clearly evidenced.

As a matter of fact, the people of this country are too busy with more important matters to waste much time on such petty nuisances and it is a good thing that the work of the Dies committee is to be continued, and the FBI is available to keep tab on subversive activities of small groups, just as individuals and communities are required to be on the lookout to prevent damage by rats.

Silver Anniversary of Kiwanis

AS KIWANIS INTERNATIONAL this week reaches the twenty-fifth anniversary of its organization it is fitting that recognition be accorded the successful development of an idea that was in the minds of a few Detroit men back in 1915—finding a way to assist some boy or group of boys who needed help.

From the small beginning of one club organized in Detroit, the Kiwanis idea spread in the same year to a Cleveland and Pittsburgh club and has since extended to more than two thousand cities and towns in the United States and Canada, with an active membership in excess of 100,000.

Little more than five years after Kiwanis came into being the Mansfield club was organized and, during the almost twenty years of its existence has won for itself a high place among this community's service groups, with a well-defined program in accord with Kiwanis ideals, which is consistently carried on.

Like other service groups, each of which is dependent on active participation of individual members, Kiwanis strives toward an idealism which is recognized as essential to continuous progress of civilization and to the ultimate accomplishment of world peace.

Its objects include emphasis on the human and spiritual rather than the material values of life; application of the golden rule in all human relationships; adoption and application of higher social, business and professional standards; development, by precept and example, of a more intelligent, aggressive and serviceable citizenship; to form enduring friendships, render altruistic service and build better communities; to co-operate in creating and maintaining that sound public opinion and high idealism which makes possible the increase of righteousness, justice, patriotism and good will.

Local application of the principles of Kiwanis have been seen in a variety of community service activities, with emphasis on encouragement and financial aid to Friendly House in the fine work being done by that institution in its own special field.

Another reading of Kiwanis "objects" will give food for thought as to changed conditions that would be brought about in Mansfield and other cities if this idealism could be translated into reality, or, as Grove Patterson put it, in a recent address here—if there were general acceptance of self-imposed discipline, and "recognition of personal responsibility for corporate action."

Tragedy Conveys Warning

SUCH tragedies as that which recently shocked Chelsea, Mass., a city slightly larger than Mansfield, may at least be made to serve the good purpose of conveying a warning that such dangers exist, and that deadly weapons should be entrusted only to persons of dependable sobriety and judgment.

In the Chelsea incident two persons were killed and another seriously wounded when a drink-crazed patrolman attacked a superior officer, following a reprimand for drinking. Associated with a report on the occurrence was a statement to the effect that this patrolman had been "in trouble repeatedly" during his 12 years on the force.

It may be wondered why a person who had been "in trouble repeatedly" during service in a police department would be retained in a position of large responsibility, but, if anything is learned from such a happening it is that extreme care should be exercised in selection of men whose duties require that they carry revolvers or other weapons.

Finland's Heroic Pledge

HERE is a patriotic pledge that evidences the height to which national unity can rise when a valiant people are threatened with the destruction of all they hold dear:

"We will fight to the last of our old men and the last of our children. We will burn our houses and our forests. We will destroy our towns and our industries, and what we give to the Russians will be ruined by nature."

This is not the raving of a madman. It is the calm, cold statement of Field Marshal Baron Carl von Mannerheim, commander-in-chief of the Finnish armies, aged 72 and veteran of several wars. The record of this soldier, and of his troops, and of the women and even the children of Finland as our war correspondents have observed them, supports the general's words.

Will such a people be able to fight alone against overwhelming power? If so, it will have the free civilization they represent. The new spirit they have aroused in a world whose democracies were beginning to waver should bring them help from many fronts.

Which Will You Short-Change—Old Folks or Kids?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

ALL RIGHT, you've gotta make up your mind quick. Which are you going to Short Change! The Old Folks or the Kids?

Crazy talk? No, 'tisn't. It's a current problem which you can't duck. And either choice means tragedy. Henry F. Pringle tells about it in the January issue of Good Housekeeping. And if it jolts you as hard as it did me, you'll be doing your thinking standing up.

You've heard about Old Age Pensions. And approved of them, probably. And you've heard about American Education. And approved again. But have you ever realized that one was raising Cain with the other . . . that we must eventually choose which we'll keep going — THE OLD FOLKS OR THE KIDS?

"PENSIONS OR SCHOOL FUNDS?"—that's how Mr. Pringle puts it up to us. "Between the millions of school children," says he, "and old people in the United States is being waged a war of which neither side is aware. One army marches to school in the morning, studies and plays until afternoon, and then goes marching home again . . . they are not in the least concerned with what is going on. But neither, it would appear, are their parents, and that is a great deal more serious.

"The other army flies the tattered banners of age . . . The men who march with it are usually unemployed. The women slave too hard in homes that are dark and dingy . . .

"Right now the weary army of the aged is winning the war to get more federal funds, more state funds, more city funds . . . because they have organized themselves . . . As a consequence, many a handsome city school is being run on insufficient funds or on a part-time schedule . . .

"In Texas, in Ohio, in California, in Colorado . . . the demands for larger and larger old-age pensions are a source of desperate worry for educators. New York . . . has also found it necessary to economize in education. Last year's legislature reduced the state appropriation for schools by $10,000,000 . . . The New York schools are operating on a $2,000,000 deficit."

A cruel quandry—and the figures which Mr. Pringle quotes don't lessen your pity and confusion. For the Pressure Groups are undoubtedly getting the best of it. Old Folks can vote—and will. And heaven help the politician who doesn't heed their ballot. California has recently raised her old age pension to $40 per month—against a previous $32. But at the same time how about those beautiful California schools—finest in the land? Salaries are being cut . . . courses eliminated . . . teachers dropped. "The West End district won't open this year." So Ed, who might have made a brilliant lawyer, will remain a wandering farm hand. And Ellen—?

Yet, for all their seeming success, I suspect the Old Folks are getting the worst of the deal. PENSIONS CAN BE POISONOUS. Middle Age is a tricky time. Take away a kid's incentive and responsibility and he'll slump. But so'll a Grown Man. The citizen who has really done his part and is stranded now deserves all the help and gratitude his government can give him.

BUT ARE YOU DOING A MAN A KINDNESS IF YOU TAKE AWAY HIS AMBITION—MAKE A BUM OUT OF HIM BEFORE HIS TIME?

I know what I'm talking about. I'm 56 myself—and I spent three-fourths of that time patching and pinching. What would I be today if I didn't have to hustle? I HATE TO THINK! What would have happened to our colonies if our Ancestors had been changed to a Rocking Chair Brigade? And who'll be running us tomorrow if Pop grabs the candy today—leaves Little Willie holding the empty bag? Not so hot!

Think it over. Think it over—HARD!

Health And Diet

How Weather Controls Health.

—By DR. CLENDENING

THE WEATHER this year is engaging the serious attention of more people than it has for 25 years. Every general staff of every army has to study weather and climatic conditions in order to keep large bodies of armed forces at the highest pitch of physical vigor.

Physical vigor is maintained best in temperate climates. There is no instance in history where troops from tropical regions or from arctic regions have beaten troops from temperate regions.

Our general energy level and physical tone are determined by the ease or difficulty with which heat is lost from the body. When the heat loss is difficult, as in tropical climates, internal combustion is slowed and available energy falls, and all the vital functions of the body are depressed. "Vital functions include the intellectual processes of the general staff.

Extreme cold may promote harmful chilling by too rapid removal of body heat. This results in exhaustion of the body and a greater susceptibility to infection. When southerners migrate to temperate regions, their resistance and ability to fight infection is much reduced over that of the native population. Pneumonia is more deadly in them and tuberculosis runs a more rapid course.

Respiratory Infections.

Shifting troops from tropical regions to temperate regions involves the incurrence of respiratory infections. Shifting troops from the north to the south involves a different kind of danger. According to military medical authorities, it produces symptoms of insufficiency of the adrenal glands. The adrenal glands have to do with combustion and with the sympathetic nervous system.

When the need for restricting combustion lowers the functional activity of the adrenal glands, it also affects the sympathetic nervous system and the circulation.

Shifting troops from the north to the south means a marked fall in blood pressure and hypertonicity of the digestive system.

Nature's Experiment.

During the very severe summer of 1934, in the middle west, Nature made an experiment of its own which was observed, and the observations show that the blood pressure fell about 30 per cent and there was a general relief from symptoms of heart disease.

Changeable temperatures and the pressure of storm zones produce a population badly afflicted with arthritis and chronic respiratory trouble—chronic bronchitis, sinus disease, etc.

For some curious reason, acute appendicitis is related to storm pathways, following almost the same curve as respiratory infection, and although the occurrence of acute appendicitis is highest in the colder climates, the fatality rate drops in those same regions.

Economic depressions during the past 60 years can be so charted as to show that they have been preceded by high temperatures and [illegible]

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Several years ago Clifford C. Fischer, producer of the Folies Bergere, sent me a pet monkey, and as I was—to say the least—caught unawares, I turned to Ed Stanley, a newspaperman now handling publicity for Paul V. McNutt, and asked him what in the world I should do with it.

He thought for a moment and then said, "Why don't you give it to Charles Norman. He's a lonely sort of guy and it might be a lot of comfort to him."

Norman at that time was a feature writer for the AP Feature Service and spending his spare time on a biography of Christopher Marlowe, the Elizabethan playwright and contemporary of Shakespeare who finally lost his life in a tavern brawl. A chapter of this unfinished biography has already appeared in one of the popular periodicals.

We worked in the same office for a number of years, and when he resigned I assumed he quit because he wanted more time to work on this biography. Once I went with him to the home of his very good friends, the Carl Carmers, who wrote "Stars Fell on Alabama," and while we were there Mrs. Carmer showed me a watercolor that Norman had done and presented to her. I didn't even know he was interested in painting.

But now it appears that he left his job—not to write, but to paint. That was just a little over two years ago. This month New Yorkers have been finding in the Julien Levy Gallery, at 15 East 57th street, a showing of 15 watercolors by this strange and after a fashion unpredictable ex-confrere of mine. I say unpredictable because once he published a couple of books of poems, and you must admit that poets are nearly always unpredictable.

* * *

THESE watercolors of his are based on interior themes—a red pitcher, a still life with oranges, a table top, a blue rug, etc.

"I paint furniture and common household objects," he says, "because I see beauty in them just as others see beauty in sky and trees. . . . I hope eventually to add variety to my work by painting outdoor scenes, but thus far such efforts have led me only to this rueful reflection: if trees grew in pots I would be a landscape painter."

That is well put. As to his paintings, I haven't seen them; but even if I had I could make no comment, knowing nothing of art whatever. But this much of an opinion may be put forward without hazard: they may not be true art, but if Charles Norman did them they are at least interesting and different.

JAMES THURBER, the one-time Columbus reporter who became famous through his weird drawings in the New Yorker, explains how he came to collaborate with Elliot Nugent in writing their new play, "The Male Animal":

"Well," he says, "I had an idea I wanted to write a play and all I could think of was the picture of a woman fiddling with her husband's typewriter. That was the opening scene. So I wired Nugent in Hollywood and said, 'Let's write a play,' and he wired back, 'Nothing doing.' So I went out to Hollywood and walked in on Elliott and told him I was ready to go to work. Then he said, 'What's it going to be about?' and I said, 'Well, the first scene is about a woman playing with a typewriter.' But Elliott said, 'That's out,' and I knew the collaboration was on."

The Harness Maker

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

MY CAR refused to start one sub-zero morning, and after a neighbor had pushed me almost a mile to get my engine going, I hunted a garage. As I entered I saw the place was hung with horse collars, pads and harness. Here was something new!

Looking through a door I saw a harness maker's "horse," while all about the sides of the room hung leather collars, new tugs, and various leather straps. Beneath the work bench was a loosely-rolled sheet of leather. An old man standing near must have noticed the question in my face.

"My stepson and I have this business together," he volunteered. "I used to be a saddler before anybody heard of automobiles. It was a thriving trade, then, for factory-made harness and collars wasn't to be had. Good leather was cheaper then, and better quality than it is now. Harness lasted longer, too, and was used every day. I had orders then, from all this country 'round, and some farmers came from quite a distance. Nobody charged so much for his time in those [illegible] and a dollar went [illegible]."

"How old is that saddler's 'horse'?" I inquired, pointing to the tool.

"Oh that—it belonged to my father, and I've used it a good many years myself. It's helped to stitch thousands of tugs," and he almost stroked it as he spoke. "It brings us business yet. Cities don't have harness shops no more, and it's quite an accommodation to a farmer to get his harness fixed when it needs it. They hunt me up from big towns miles away when they need saddling done. Gives me a good feelin' too. I'm thinkin' it'll be a sad day when horses go out of the picture more'n they are now. Why, I remember when buggies was standing side by side in this old town, all along Main street, and farmers would put their horses in feed barns to spend the day. People were more prosperous then than they are now. It didn't cost so much for repairs. You could see horses standin' to be shod at every blacksmith shop, and hear the hammers ringin' on the anvils from one end of town to the other. I won't be at this work [illegible] and then they'll [illegible]."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

(Editor's Note — One of the Merry-Go-Rounders, Bob Allen, a close friend of Senator William E. Borah, today tells a personal story.)

WASHINGTON—The senate just doesn't seem the same without Senator Borah.

He was the first leader I came to know intimately as a cub Washington reporter fifteen years ago, and I saw him last the day before his fatal accident. I think I am the last newsman he talked to.

It was late in the afternoon. I knew that the president's message on the Finnish loan was due the next day, and I dropped into Borah's office to get his views. Wrapped in an army blanket, he was lying on a couch, reading an article on trade treaties. He motioned me to a chair, which I pulled up near him. On the marble mantel directly over him was a striking new photograph of himself which he liked very much.

Borah looked well, but frail and recalling that during the Christmas holiday he had told me he was thinking of taking Mrs. Borah south I said "What about your trip?"

"I guess that's off, Robert," he replied. "Mrs. Borah won't stay if I don't, and I can't."

"Why not? Things aren't so active now. A few weeks of warm weather and sunshine would do you a lot of good."

"Yes, but I can't leave. Those trade treaties are up and I've got to be on hand to keep an eye on developments. It's a close fight and we can't take any chances. I would like a little rest, but I feel it's my duty to stay on the job and oppose this act."

"What about this Finnish loan?" I asked.

"That's a very distressing dilemma for me, Robert," he said. "My heart goes out to those gallant people, but at the same time I have grave misgivings about lending money to anyone in Europe. Once we let down the bars we can't foresee what it may lead to. We must keep out of that mess regardless of our personal sympathies."

* * *

1936 Dilemma.

I REMEMBER another time when he was in a dilemma. It was in 1936.

That spring, at the age of 71 and for the first time in his long career, he decided to make a serious try for the presidency. There was considerable popular response, but the machine politicians were against him. He went to the Cleveland convention empty-handed—and he knew it.

The night Herbert Hoover made his speech — which he secretly hoped would stampede the delegates — I encountered Borah leaving his hotel. It was past midnight, hot and sticky.

"Come along, Robert, and walk with me," he said. "It's cooler out here."

So we walked about the deserted streets and he talked about Hoover, the convention, and Alf Landon.

"They'll nominate Landon tomorrow," he said. "The stage is all set. Hoover tried to run away with the convention tonight, but they don't want any of him. It will be Landon and Knox, you mark my word."

"And then what are you going to do, Senator?"

"I don't know. I'll wait and see what Landon says. But what I'm wondering is what can he say. He knows nothing about national or foreign affairs. I am told he is a nice gentleman, but the country needs more than that in the White House in these times. I don't want to prejudge Landon. I shall hear him out, but I have a strong hunch I will not support him."

Borah's premonition was right. Three months later I spent a day with him in Boise as he campaigned for his sixth senatorial term. We had a long talk that night in his room before he retired. I remarked that I hadn't heard him say a word during the day about Landon.

"And I don't intend to say anything about him," Borah replied quietly. "I am not for him."

"Are you for Roosevelt?"

"Well, Robert," he said. "I've got a lot of Democratic friends in Idaho and I think they know where I stand." And then with a gentle smile he added, "That's a pretty good news story, isn't it?"

It certainly was. It was the big scoop of the campaign.

* * *

No Hazing.

ALL the New Deal Supreme Court justices attended the White House ceremony when Justice Frank Murphy took the oath of office. As the president shook Murphy's hand he observed solemnly:

"Frank, I've got it all fixed up for you. The sophomores on the court have promised me that they won't haze the freshman."

* * *

White House Receptions.

THE WHITE HOUSE social list is not as exclusive as you might suppose. If you want to be on the list, you don't have to wait to be chosen. All you've got to do is to drive up to the front door and, in effect, tell 'em you want an invitation.

This is strictly according to the rules of protocol. Nothing brash about it. You come up to the door and hand your cards to one of the White House guards, as if you were going to pay a call. In fact, this amounts to paying a call. And in return, you will get an invitation to a tea, a musicale, or a garden party.

The mechanics of the business are like this: The guard passes your cards to the footman, who clips them together and puts them in a basket inside the door. Secretaries make up a list from them, hoping you have not forgotten to scribble your address on the card so they will know where to send the invitation.

The list goes to Mrs. James M. Helm, efficient social secretary of the White House, who does a little culling of the names she and associates cannot identify. Then the invitations go out. You have in effect asked for an invitation—and got it.

* * *

Exclusive Parties.

OF COURSE, the invitation will not be for an evening reception, for which the lists are more official and exclusive. To rate a reception, you have to be a diplomat, a member of congress, a departmental executive, a high ranking officer of the army or navy (officers below the rank of lieutenant colonel and commander are excluded), or, as a last chance, a member of the press.

On a still higher plane of exclusiveness are White House dinners. Formal dinners are given in the state dining-room for visiting rulers, such as the king and queen of England; and others, less formal, to which an odd miscellany of people are invited—church dignitaries, newspaper editors, social planners, and campaign contributors.

Most intimate Roosevelt dinners are held in the family dining-room, especially the Sunday evening dinners, where Mrs. Roosevelt prepares scrambled eggs in a chafing dish for people she can call by their first names—Henry and Elinor Morgenthau, Henry and Ilo Wallace, Caroline O'Day, Sam Rosenman, Oscar Chapman, "Missy" LeHand.

Intimate or otherwise, there are always guests at the White House. If the president and Mrs. Roosevelt should find themselves alone at the dinner table, they would scarcely know how to behave.

CHAPTER VI

After they had ordered, Claire asked Danny about the four people she had just met. She was still plagued by the warning from her companion in the cab.

"Rene and Maria I have known for some time," the correspondent answered. "Maria is a Russian, as you probably guessed from her appearance and her name. She is a designer for Gorelle, the famous dressmaker you know. And she has done some very nice water colors, too. Landscapes, mostly."

"Captain Martin obviously is in the army," she suggested. "A professional soldier?"

Danny laughed, condescendingly.

"I'm afraid you'd make a poor detective, Claire," he chuckled. "Rather, he is a career man. He was a brilliant under official in the ministry of war before all this business started in Poland. He undoubtedly was headed for the cabinet. But the day war began, he resigned and joined the army—at his reserve rank as a captain of aviation."

"He seems quite charming."

"All of that. He and Maria have been in love for several years—ever since I've known them. They are nice people."

Who are the Rolands?"

"I know little about them. I met them tonight for the first time. Rene told me he was an American—an importer who has had a shop just off the Rue de la Paix for years—fifteen, I think he said. His wife obviously is an American, considerably younger than he."

"Do you mean you think Roland may not be American? Why, his accent is umistakable. I'd say Middle West."

"Most any one would. That's what makes me a bit skeptical. Fifteen years in Paris, and still this 'Pleased to meetcha' business somehow just doesn't match up."

He laughed, and buttered a piece of bread before he went on.

"That's what the newspaper business does to you, Claire," he grinned. "You get so you're never quite willing to accept any one at face value. I'm quite sure the Rolands must be everything they seem and pretend to be They're apparently friends of Maria and Rene, and that's good enough for me."

* * *

He waved at a man who passed them, two tables away, headed toward the front of the cafe Claire's eyes followed the man, and then went to her companion's face inquiringly.

"Fred Nestor, head of a big news service," Danny explained.

"German ancestry?"

She was surprised when Danny laughed aloud.

"His size and complexion, and his hair cut in that style do suggest it, don't they? As a matter of fact, I believe he's a native son of California. His family originally came from Scotland. I'll have to tell him you mistook him for a Nazi. He'll probably be furious."

"Please don't Danny. I'll admit that as a detective I'm terrible. That's why I wanted to see you. I hoped you might be able to help me. Mr Cameron has disappeared!"

"What? I thought both of you were leaving today on the St. Croix!"

"So did I, but Bill—I mean, Mr. Cameron—didn't show up, and I got off at the last minute and hurried back to Paris to look for him."

* * *

Briefly, she told him of discovering the extra overnight case among her baggage. Of turning it over to the Surete. Of the discovery that it contained enough incendiary powder to destroy the big liner

"Boy, what a yarn! If I could only get it past the censor!"

"Please don't, Danny—at least not until we find out what has happened to Mr. Cam . . ."

She stopped suddenly, her eyes fastened on the group across the room, the group made up of the Rolands, Maria Herczek and Captain Martin.

"Why, what's wrong?" Danny demanded.

"Maybe it's just imagination," Claire answered, slowly. "but I just suddenly had the idea that Maria Herczek was reading my lips!"

Danny Brooks looked at Claire Dutton in amazement.

"Whatever gave you such an idea?" the correspondent demanded. 'And why should Maria want to read your lips?"

"I don't know. But that's what I thought. Perhaps it's just because I'm nervous, after what I've gone through today. I'm seeing spies behind every potted palm."

Brooks questioned her about Cameron's plans — covering the same ground she had gone over with Welles Sanford and Pierre Bornet—but she told it eagerly, hoping that somewhere she would strike a responsive chord. Remind Brooks of something Cameron might have told him when they were together. But apparently the girl's employer had not confided in his old friends. The newspaper man knew nothing about where he might be.

"What I can't understand," he said, finally, "is why the deuce you didn't stay on that boat when you were there?"

"And then it probably would have caught afire in mid-ocean, and I would have been turned out like a nice crisp piece of bacon," she retorted.

"I don't mean that—of course, that was serious. You did a great job in taking that stuff straight to headquarters. But you didn't really know there was anything wrong until you got back to Paris. Why did you come back?"

"I—I don't know," the girl confessed.

"Don't tell me you're in love with Bill Cameron?" Danny demanded suddenly, and Claire felt the color surge into her cheeks. "How about it?" he persisted as she didn't answer.

"Perhaps — maybe that's it, Danny," she admitted, slowly. "But I knew I couldn't leave France without knowing where he is."

"You realize, my dear girl, that this is war. That your boss—my good friend Bill Cameron — has been engaged in highly dangerous business. It is very likely that he had made himself a marked man. And things happen to marked men. Did that thought ever occur to you, Claire? I don't want to be cruel, or brutal, but facts are facts and you must be prepared to face them."

"I've thought of that, too," the girl answered. "But I'm sure that he is alive. I'd bank my life on it!"

* * *

She had been doubly reassured by what the mysterious man who signed himself "Z. Y." had told her. His words sung in her brain. "Cameron is alive." She didn't mention him to Danny, though.

"I surely hope you're right — that your hunch is a good one."

"Boy, what a yarn! I'd get banner lines in every paper in America! 'U. S. GIRL FOILS PLOT TO BURN LINER.' That would be one story. The other one, 'FAMOUS U. S. SECRET DIPLOMAT VANISHES.' Two knockout stories in one day, and clean scoops at that. If I could only get them past the censors!" He scowled at his plate for a moment, and then suddenly his brow cleared like the sky after a thundershower.

"I've got it!" he exclaimed. "They've just reopened the Italian border. I'll phone Miles, our man in Nice—give him the lowdown. He can slip across into Italy, find a cable station and flash the stuff direct to New York. It'll be terrific!"

"Please, Danny, don't!" Claire begged. "It may jeopardize everything. If Mr. Cameron is alive—and I'm sure he is—it may mean his death sentence. Pierre Bornet told me it was a very delicate situation. Don't you see?"

Danny reluctantly agreed finally that he did see, and salved his professional conscience by saying that he didn't believe the Italian censors would pass the story anyway.

They had been so intent on their conversation that neither had noticed that the Rolands, Maria and Captain Martin were approaching their table. They looked up in surprise as the Russian girl spoke.

"We're all going over to my flat," Maria said. "Why don't you two come along? The cafe closes, shortly, you know."

"I'd be glad to," Claire spoke up and Danny said he could come for a time."

"I may have to leave early," he said.

VETS TO START CATTLE TESTS

State and County to Finance Examination to Determine Tuberculosis Victims.

Six veterinarians will start testing Richland county cattle for tuberculosis within a few days under a program financed jointly by the state and county, County Agent George B. Ganyard said today.

County commissioners recently appropriated $4,000 as the county's share of the cost of the testing which is required every three years. Tests in two of the county's 18 townships will be financed by the state.

It is expected that several weeks will be needed to complete the work. The tests are made by inserting a fluid under the cow's hide. In infected animals swelling usually develops where the injection was made.

County dairy herds must show less than one-half of one per cent infection to give the county an accredited rating, necessary to permit the sale of milk.

Veterinarians who will conduct the tests are Drs. C. C. Wadsworth, R. H. Wadsworth, Ben Henson, and S. E. Taylor of Mansfield, W. R. Henson of Shelby, and C. B. Stanley of Bellville.

Mrs. Robert Jones, President, Mrs. Samuel Hawkins Named Delegates to Annual Conference at Columbus In March.

Mismated But In Love, Her Problem

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Every marriage is an individual proposition. A man who has every quality which makes for good fortune is held back by some weak, foolish woman, a human handicap.

Splendid courageous women with the capacity for love and gifts which make for genuine success are tied to weak, inefficient men—spineless creatures who are synonymns of failure.

Curiously enough, these mismated creatures often love each other devotedly. Question, what's to be done? Should the gifted go through life with a clod which retards, or break the bonds in the hope of making a better choice, only to miss the weak creature who in his or her way has the gift of making the stronger life partner happy?

This eternal question is again raised by a highly interesting letter which comes from a woman correspondent:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am married to a man I love dearly. He is everything any woman could desire. He gives me his pay check every week. He never looks at another woman. He will help with the housework. Yet I'm not happy.

When we were married, our joint salaries amounted to $50 a week, and we were very comfortable. Then came the realization that I was not living the kind of life I had hoped for. I wanted children to stay home and take care of them, and there was little chance of advancement where my husband worked.

"He studied for three different Civil Service examinations, but was unable to pass any of them. He then decided to take up another course, which cost a considerable sum of money. Realizing the expense, my parents invited us to live with them until my husband could get a start, which he has never succeeded in doing. He has an inferiority complex, is shy, distrustful of himself, and does not make a good impression, though he is absolutely conscientious and faithful.

"I often put in nine and a half and ten hours a day on my job. I've tried to be forceful with him, and told him I would quit. He gets up early and works 'til late, trying to get a job but never succeeding. He begs me to be patient, but I have been tragically patient. It's not that he is lazy, because when he has a chance he will do the hardest kind of work. But he is just ineffectual.

"I don't want much, Miss Fairfax, only some sense of security for myself and for the children I hope that God may bless us with.

Despairing Wife."

It would be so easy to say keep on trying in the hope that your husband would overcome that constitutional weakness, that sense of self-distrust, which prevents an employer from recognizing that he's the faithful plodding type, which makes him worthy of his hire.

In her heart this woman is deeply maternal, and this ineffectual man who tries but never succeeds appeals to her maternal instinct.

Marriage Meddlers

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"YOU ARE sure?" I asked, subconsciously sparring for time, even though I guessed the goal of my maneuvers was in sight.

"Very sure," she returned, "that is—if you keep your side of the bargain. I am not giving an unconditional promise."

"I am not expecting one," I said quickly. "If I do not succeed in getting the role for you that you wish, I will release you from your promise."

"You won't need to," she retorted. "I shall release myself—and promptly. But with that understanding, I give you my solemn word that I will not bother Mary or her husband any more. I shall only speak to them when it is absolutely necessary to preserve the social amenities. Does that satisfy you?"

"Perfectly," I told her. "Let us not speak of that angle of the question again."

"I certainly do not wish to refer to it," she said, a bit stiffly. "And now, will you please tell me just what you mean to do about me?"

Up to Veritzen.

"You must do something first," I said. "You must see Mr. Veritzen as soon as he comes back here after interviewing your mother, and ask him to give you a role in my play. You would better say that you have asked me about it, and that I am willing to write in something for you, if he will give me permission to do so."

"He'll give you permission," she said confidently. "Even if he wouldn't ordinarily do it for my own sake, he will be in the mood to grant anything to anybody this morning."

"I wonder if you've realized," I said slowly, "just how much this mood of his, which will undoubtedly be a permanent one when he marries your mother, will mean to you if you do not antagonize him by groundless jealousy."

"Groundless!" she echoed bitterly. "He's taking my mother away from me."

"Nobody can do that save yourself," I told her didactically. "Your mother loves you very dearly."

"She loves him better." Her voice was again that of a grieving child.

"That I do not know," I said. "I doubt it. But I am very sure of this. If she did not believe that marrying Philip Veritzen would bring back to you the wealth, the luxury, the high position from which you have been exiled, and would eventually make you happy, she would not accept his suit."

"I suppose I could stop it if I tried," she said speculatively.

"No doubt you could," I said sternly. "Devoted mothers are like that. But I cannot believe that you would consider stopping it when you know you would deprive your mother of romantic happiness, and of the luxury and tender care to which her long years of royal regime have accustomed her."

"Oh! of course you are right," she said, and my pulse quickened, for there was real acquiescence in her tone. "But I can't help resenting him nevertheless."

"Of course you can't," I told her, for I realized that her mood was softening, and guessed that a soothing word or two might not be amiss. "But I think when you realize to what lengths he will go to make you happy and of the life which you will lead as his daughter, to say nothing of the professional world he can open to you, your resentment will lessen."

She was silent for a second, then she gave an expressive shrug.

"It's probably Fate," she said, "and therefore it's useless to fight against it."

"I don't believe you'll want to, after the first shock of this knowledge is over," I said. Then I involuntarily stiffened as Lillian's knock sounded on the door.

"Who is that?" Olina asked in startled tones, but I threw the door open without answering her, for I knew she would wish to avoid Lillian, and there was no way possible to grant her wish.

But Lilian did not come into the room. From just outside the door she gave me her message.

"Phil is just leaving Olga's apartment," she said in tones loud enough for Olina to hear. Then she lowered her voice.

"And no strutting turkey cock in the world has anything on him," she muttered, and turned toward the advancing figure of Philip Veritzen.

Why is it good bridge for South to open the bidding on this deal with 1-Heart?

GET OUT OF THE WAY

When you are making a short-suit lead against No Trump, from a three-card holding that contains two honors, it will nearly always pay you to lead one of the high cards, ordinarily the middle card. If you lead the bottom card, you are likely to find that you have blocked the suit, which otherwise your partner might establish and run. By beginning to get out of his way early, you avoid making interference for the enemy—to borrow a football term.

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South began this deal with 1-Club in a rubber game of fair players. North responded with 1-Diamond, South bid 1-Spade. North 2-Clubs as a mere preference, and South 3-No Trumps.

Not liking to lead any of the three suits called by his opponents, West chose a heart, especially since the bidding indicated it might be his partner's long suit and also since his partner appeared likely to have a few honors as side entries for it. But he unfortunately chose the particular card recommended by most of the books which are still current but are unsound on this point. He led the 6.

The 10 went up in dummy, the J in the East and South took with the K. Seeing that he couldn't get nine tricks without some in diamonds, and hoping the hearts were only four cards long, he led diamonds at once. East won with the A and returned a heart to West's two honors, but then the show was over, as the suit was blocked, so South made 4-No Trumps.

If West had led the heart Q, the contract would have been set, regardless of whether South won that trick or not. Figure all variations of declarer's effort after that, and you will see he could not prevent his adversaries from getting four tricks in that suit, plus the diamond A.

Cures for Oily Tresses

By MME. QUI VIVE

No woman wants to carry through life a brain mat that looks as if it had been larded—one hair smacked down upon another as if the cat had licked them.

First step for the oily tops is to find out if the shampoo is properly done. The slighest bit of soap scum left in the hair will raise mischief. It is the belief of this preacher of pulchritude that many a woman has never had a thorough shampoo, the cleansing agent being wrong, not enough friction employed, or the rinsing not prolonged enough to clear the silky strands of soap.

Beauty shop operators will tell you of heads they have to tackle that are so gummed up with soap that eggs or a dry cleaning agent has to be used. Those so afflicted bawl at the top of their lungs about oily hair. If the shampoo agent is a good one, bland but effective, the oiliest head of hair will stay fluffy and normal for at least two weeks. The soap must be melted, there should be three sudsings, as many rinsings, the rinsing accompanied with a spray and a current of water strong enough to rattle your brains.

Overactive sebaceous glands play a part in the buttering of the glorious crown. There is a theory that these glands become over-stimulated when the diet contains too much fat. So, if you are seeking a way of de-lubricating your tresses, be stingy with the butter when you spread it on your bread. Cut out pastries. Eat green salads, drink fruit juices, take five or six glasses of water a day.

Ventilation is helpful. At bedtime, before tucking your hair into a wave net, slip your fingers under your wool, lifting it away from the head. Run your fingers through it. Give your scalp a normalizing friction, pinching the flesh, working your thumbs in circles along the forward hairline and the nape of the neck.

Be choosey when getting hats. Avoid tight head bands that restrict circulation. Select light fabrics instead of heavy felts. Some day we may have chapeaux that are air conditioned. Wouldn't that be grand? Sit in the sunlight whenever you have the opportunity. Sunshine influences sebaceous glands to ease up and take time off.

The night before the shampoo give yourself a scalp treatment with eau de cologne, the alcoholic content of which will tone the tissues, cause the blood streams to up and hurry.

Use setting lotions of light consistency. If your permanent is an extra strong one it is possible to dispense with setting lotions.

Actress Owner of 'Most Expensive' Dog In America

(By International News Service)

FORT WORTH, Tex.—Vivienne Segal, once of the cast in the Southwestern road show of "I Married an Angel," claims she has the "most expensive" dog in America.

The Cairn terrier isn't so high-powered on pedigree, but in actual wealth probably no dog can top him. Two years ago he swallowed a five-carat diamond ring, and since the veterinarian who X-rayed to make the discovery said an operation would be necessary, Miss Segal is letting the pup finish his days without disturbance.

After the terrier's life span is finished, she may consent to an operation, the actress says. Meanwhile, she keeps the dog heavily insured.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, Jan. 24.

According to the lunar and mutual aspects, this should be a very busy day. There may be many tenacious obstacles, probably delays and disappointments. These may be best side-stepped by diligence and determination, and the use of tact or subtlety in handling dangerous and difficult opposition. This applies especially to deals with employers, superiors or those in power. The dubious situations may have reactions on the personal life, where something is likely to "split open" suddenly. Be guided by intuitions and read papers cautiously.

Those whose birthday it is may be ready for a lively and challenging year, with much of a stubborn or thwarting nature to stimulate hard work and good judgment. Keen impressions or intuitions might serve better than orthodox promptings. Also be cautious with papers. The dubious conditions also react in private affairs.

A child born on this day, although deep, studious reserved, secretive and mistrustful, may succeed through its native intuitions or possibly "psychic hunches. A training in strict integrity would not be amiss.

Snow covered roofs - if you are lucky enough to have one—are not only ornamental, they are a great help in keeping the house warm and saving fuel. Snow is one of the finest insulating materials, except for its tendency to melt. And if the snow on your roof melts quickly in cold weather you probably need better internal insulation or heat—loss barriers. It is proof that the warmth melting that snow is coming out of your heating plant.

Mismated But In Love, Her Problem

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Every marriage is an individual proposition. A man who has every quality which makes for good fortune is held back by some weak, foolish woman, a human handicap.

Splendid courageous women with the capacity for love and gifts which make for genuine success are tied to weak, inefficient men—spineless creatures who are synonymns of failure.

Curiously enough, these mismated creatures often love each other devotedly. Question, what's to be done? Should the gifted go through life with a clod which retards, or break the bonds in the hope of making a better choice, only to miss the weak creature who in his or her way has the gift of making the stronger life partner happy?

This eternal question is again raised by a highly interesting letter which comes from a woman correspondent:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am married to a man I love dearly. He is everything any woman could desire. He gives me his pay check every week. He never looks at another woman. He will help with the housework. Yet I'm not happy.

When we were married, our joint salaries amounted to $50 a week, and we were very comfortable. Then came the realization that I was not living the kind of life I had hoped for. I wanted children to stay home and take care of them, and there was little chance of advancement where my husband worked.

"He studied for three different Civil Service examinations, but was unable to pass any of them. He then decided to take up another course, which cost a considerable sum of money. Realizing the expense, my parents invited us to live with them until my husband could get a start, which he has never succeeded in doing. He has an inferiority complex, is shy, distrustful of himself, and does not make a good impression, though he is absolutely conscientious and faithful.

"I often put in nine and a half and ten hours a day on my job. I've tried to be forceful with him, and told him I would quit. He gets up early and works 'til late, trying to get a job but never succeeding. He begs me to be patient, but I have been tragically patient. It's not that he is lazy, because when he has a chance he will do the hardest kind of work. But he is just ineffectual.

"I don't want much, Miss Fairfax, only some sense of security for myself and for the children I hope that God may bless us with.

Despairing Wife."

It would be so easy to say keep on trying in the hope that your husband would overcome that constitutional weakness, that sense of self-distrust, which prevents an employer from recognizing that he's the faithful plodding type, which makes him worthy of his hire.

In her heart this woman is deeply maternal, and this ineffectual man who tries but never succeeds appeals to her maternal instinct.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"YOU ARE sure?" I asked, subconsciously sparring for time, even though I guessed the goal of my maneuvers was in sight.

"Very sure," she returned, "that is—if you keep your side of the bargain. I am not giving an unconditional promise."

"I am not expecting one," I said quickly. "If I do not succeed in getting the role for you that you wish, I will release you from your promise."

"You won't need to," she retorted. "I shall release myself—and promptly. But with that understanding, I give you my solemn word that I will not bother Mary or her husband any more. I shall only speak to them when it is absolutely necessary to preserve the social amenities. Does that satisfy you?"

"Perfectly," I told her. "Let us not speak of that angle of the question again."

"I certainly do not wish to refer to it," she said, a bit stiffly. "And now, will you please tell me just what you mean to do about me?"

Up to Veritzen.

"You must do something first," I said. "You must see Mr. Veritzen as soon as he comes back here after interviewing your mother, and ask him to give you a role in my play. You would better say that you have asked me about it, and that I am willing to write in something for you, if he will give me permission to do so."

"He'll give you permission," she said confidently. "Even if he wouldn't ordinarily do it for my own sake, he will be in the mood to grant anything to anybody this morning."

"I wonder if you've realized," I said slowly, "just how much this mood of his, which will undoubtedly be a permanent one when he marries your mother, will mean to you if you do not antagonize him by groundless jealousy."

"Groundless!" she echoed bitterly. "He's taking my mother away from me."

"Nobody can do that save yourself," I told her didactically. "Your mother loves you very dearly."

"She loves him better." Her voice was again that of a grieving child.

"That I do not know," I said. "I doubt it. But I am very sure of this. If she did not believe that marrying Philip Veritzen would bring back to you the wealth, the luxury, the high position from which you have been exiled, and would eventually make you happy, she would not accept his suit."

"I suppose I could stop it if I tried," she said speculatively.

"No doubt you could," I said sternly. "Devoted mothers are like that. But I cannot believe that you would consider stopping it when you know you would deprive your mother of romantic happiness, and of the luxury and tender care to which her long years of royal regime have accustomed her."

"Oh! of course you are right," she said, and my pulse quickened, for there was real acquiescence in her tone. "But I can't help resenting him nevertheless."

"Of course you can't," I told her, for I realized that her mood was softening, and guessed that a soothing word or two might not be amiss. "But I think when you realize to what lengths he will go to make you happy and of the life which you will lead as his daughter, to say nothing of the professional world he can open to you, your resentment will lessen."

She was silent for a second, then she gave an expressive shrug.

"It's probably Fate," she said, "and therefore it's useless to fight against it."

"I don't believe you'll want to, after the first shock of this knowledge is over," I said. Then I involuntarily stiffened as Lillian's knock sounded on the door.

"Who is that?" Olina asked in startled tones, but I threw the door open without answering her, for I knew she would wish to avoid Lillian, and there was no way possible to grant her wish.

But Lililan did not come into the room. From just outside the door she gave me her message.

"Phil is just leaving Olga's apartment," she said in tones loud enough for Olina to hear. Then she lowered her voice.

"And no strutting turkey cock in the world has anything on him," she muttered, and turned toward the advancing figure of Philip Veritzen.

"The Authority on Authorities"

GET OUT OF THE WAY

When you are making a short-suit lead against No Trump, from a three-card holding that contains two honors, it will nearly always pay you to lead one of the high cards, ordinarily the middle card. If you lead the bottom card, you are likely to find that you have blocked the suit, which otherwise your partner might establish and run. By beginning to get out of his way early, you avoid making interference for the enemy—to borrow a football term.

South began this deal with 1-Club in a rubber game of fair players. North responded with 1-Diamond, South bid 1-Spade. North 2-Clubs as a mere preference, and South 3-No Trumps.

Not liking to lead any of the three suits called by his opponents, West chose a heart, especially since the bidding indicated it might be his partner's long suit and also since his partner appeared likely to have a few honors as side entries for it. But he unfortunately chose the particular card recommended by most of the books which are still current but are unsound on this point. He led the 6.

The 10 went up in dummy, the J in the East and South took with the K. Seeing that he couldn't get nine tricks without some in diamonds, and hoping the hearts were only four cards long, he led diamonds at once. East won with the A and returned a heart to West's two honors, but then the show was over, as the suit was blocked, so South made 4-No Trumps.

If West had led the heart Q, the contract would have been set, regardless of whether South won that trick or not. Figure all variations of declarer's effort after that, and you will see he could not prevent his adversaries from getting four tricks in that suit, plus the diamond A.

Cures for Oily Tresses

By MME. QUI VIVE

No woman wants to carry through life a brain mat that looks as if it had been larded—one hair smacked down upon another as if the cat had licked them.

First step for the oily tops is to find out if the shampoo is properly done. The slighest bit of soap scum left in the hair will raise mischief. It is the belief of this preacher of pulchritude that many a woman has never had a thorough shampoo, the cleansing agent being wrong, not enough friction employed, or the rinsing not prolonged enough to clear the silky strands of soap.

Beauty shop operators will tell you of heads they have to tackle that are so gummed up with soap that eggs or a dry cleaning agent has to be used. Those so afflicted bawl at the top of their lungs about oily hair. If the shampoo agent is a good one, bland but effective, the oiliest head of hair will stay fluffy and normal for at least two weeks. The soap must be melted, there should be three sudsings, as many rinsings, the rinsing accompanied with a spray and a current of water strong enough to rattle your brains.

Overactive sebaceous glands play a part in the buttering of the glorious crown. There is a theory that these glands become over-stimulated when the diet contains too much fat. So, if you are seeking a way of de-lubricating your tresses, be stingy with the butter when you spread it on your bread. Cut out pastries. Eat green salads, drink fruit juices, take five or six glasses of water a day.

Ventilation is helpful. At bedtime, before tucking your hair into a wave net, slip your fingers under your wool, lifting it away from the head. Run your fingers through it. Give your scalp a normalizing friction, pinching the flesh, working your thumbs in circles along the forward hairline and the nape of the neck.

Be choosey when getting hats. Avoid tight head bands that restrict circulation. Select light fabrics instead of heavy felts. Some day we may have chapeaux that are air conditioned. Wouldn't that be grand? Sit in the sunlight whenever you have the opportunity. Sunshine influences sebaceous glands to ease up and take time off.

The night before the shampoo give yourself a scalp treatment with eau de cologne, the alcoholic content of which will tone the tissues, cause the blood streams to up and hurry.

Use setting lotions of light consistency. If your permanent is an extra strong one it is possible to dispense with setting lotions.

Actress Owner of 'Most Expensive' Dog In America

(By International News Service)

FORT WORTH, Tex.—Vivienne Segal, once of the cast in the Southwestern road show of "I Married an Angel," claims she has the "most expensive" dog in America.

The Cairn terrier isn't so high-powered on pedigree, but in actual wealth probably no dog can top him. Two years ago he swallowed a five-carat diamond ring, and since the veterinarian who X-rayed to make the discovery said an operation would be necessary, Miss Segal is letting the pup finish his days without disturbance.

After the terrier's life span is finished, she may consent to an operation, the actress says. Meanwhile, she keeps the dog heavily insured.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, Jan. 24.

According to the lunar and mutual aspects, this should be a very busy day. There may be many tenacious obstacles, probably delays and disappointments. These may be best side-stepped by diligence and determination, and the use of tact or subtlety in handling dangerous and difficult opposition. This applies especially to deals with employers, superiors or those in power. The dubious situations may have reactions on the personal life, where something is likely to "split open" suddenly. Be guided by intuitions and read papers cautiously.

Those whose birthday it is may be ready for a lively and challenging year, with much of a stubborn or thwarting nature to stimulate hard work and good judgment. Keen impressions or intuitions might serve better than orthodox promptings. Also be cautious with papers. The dubious conditions also react in private affairs.

A child born on this day, although deep, studious reserved, secretive and mistrustful, may succeed through its native intuitions or possibly "psychic hunches. A training in strict integrity would not be amiss.

Snow covered roofs—if you are lucky enough to have one—are not only ornamental, they are a great help in keeping the house warm and saving fuel. Snow is one of the finest insulating materials, except for its tendency to melt. And if the snow on your roof melts quickly in cold weather you probably need better internal insulation or heat—loss barriers. It is proof that the warmth melting that snow is coming out of your heating plant.

WARD DRAWS UP RECORD VOLUME OF LEGISLATION

Drafts 261 Ordinances and Resolutions in Past Year, He Reports to Council.

Mansfield's volumes of ordinances and resolutions was increased further by an unprecedented flood of legislation enacted by city council during the past year, the annual report of City Solicitor Marion D. Ward showed today.

Ward said he prepared 261 ordinances and resolutions during 1939 a compared with 177 during the previous year. This is 18 more than were enacted by council when an all-time high of 248 pieces of legislation were drafted.

Along with this drafting of measures, Ward issued 825 legal opinions to city officials and department heads during 1939, he said. In addition he also drew up 20 contracts, agreements and miscellaneous papers as compared with eight in 1938

Court Cases Increase.

The other half of the solicitor's time was taken up in municipal court preparing affidavits, advising and interviewing witnesses and prosecuting contesfed cases in police court.

While the preparation of legal documents reached a new high, criminal cases handled during the past year also showed an increase over 1938, the report showed.

There was 1,292 cases disposed of during the 12-month period as against 1,038 in 1938. Of these 662 were city cases and 630 were state cases.

Harder Hinting

The President, outdoing radio entertainers in Jackson Day Dinner speech, is taken to hint at 1940 nomination by reference to past ability to hold coalition together. Seems that at $100 a plate, diners expected something stronger than after-dinner hints.

It is often a hint that your eyes need attention when headaches, fatigue and nervous irritability dog your every step and reduce your efficiency. These are nature's warnings and must be heeded to avoid serious eye complications in the future. Seek expert optometric care AT ONCE!

The year 1940 is the 600th anniversary of Chaucer's birth, the centenary of the first postage stamp and (approximately) the centenary of the first practical photography.

EITHER WAY, YOU WIN!

There's a new and better gasoline in both these pumps!

NEW SUPER-SHELL

Brings an extra margin of performance —at regular price.

NEW SUPER-SHELL is truthfully a startling development in motor fuels.

You can feel the difference the instant you step on your starter. NEW SUPER-SHELL "gets going" pronto —in coldest weather . . . whisks you through traffic...lets your motor take highest hills in stride! Economy? NEW SUPER-SHELL has been specially engineered to increase your savings on Stop-and-Go, the costliest kind of driving there is.

Of course NEW SUPER-SHELL costs more to make. But it costs you no more to buy!

TWO NEW TRIUMPHS FOR SHELL'S SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH

NEW SUPER-SHELL and NEW SHELL PREMIUM are the latest achievements of the Company . . .

FIRST TO SPONSOR ANTI-KNOCK RESEARCH

Under the sponsorship of Shell, Harry Ricardo discovered principles that made high compression engines possible. His experiments in flame propagation and action of aromatic hydro-carbons led to the development of Shell's "BALANCING PROCESS" in refining.

FIRST TO PRODUCE 100 OCTANE GASOLINE

Shell first produced 100 octane gasoline commercially...instrumental in bringing aviation to its present high development. Shell produced approximately 30% of all aircraft fuel used in the U. S. in 1939.

FIRST TO RE-FORM GASOLINE — and now Shell's "BALANCING PROCESS" saves you more money on Stop-and-Go

The refining secret that makes NEW SUPER-SHELL and NEW SHELL PREMIUM possible is Shell's "BALANCING PROCESS." There are many different tests by which the performance of a gasoline can be measured. "Balancing" means that no one performance characteristic is stressed at the expense of another—we don't rob Peter to pay Paul. As a result every drop of both these fuels is usable in your motor. Waste is reduced. Economy increased. Stop-and-Go costs you less.

NEW SHELL PREMIUM

The finest gasoline ever to bear the Shell name.

The same Shell scientific research, the same refining talent that first produced 100 octane fuel for racing planes, brings another great advance!

If your motor calls for anti-knock far above the average, SHELL PREMIUM is "made to order" for you. Under all driving conditions—starting, shifting, accelerating, steady running —it delivers an even wider EXTRA MARGIN OF PERFORMANCE. Costs plenty more to make but it costs you no more than the usual extra price.

Test a tankful— YOU be the judge!

To get full advantage of these new "Balanced" motor fuels, do not dilute them with ordinary gasolines.
